Jones Lane, Ten Mile was charged with promotion/facilitation to manufacture methamphetamine.

According to records, Sunday, at approximately 12:14 PM, Dusty Ingram was driving a tan Dodge Caravan and was seen leaving Walgreens Drug Store on Highway 321. Officer Jamie Whitt, LCPD stopped the vehicle in the area of Double B's BBQ because the driver's side brake light was out.

When checking the driver, Mr. Ingram, it was discovered he had an outstanding warrant out of McMinn County and he gave the officer verbal consent to search his vehicle.

During the search, the law woman found precursors for the manufacturing of methamphetamine, which included pseudo ephedrine tablets that had just been purchased from Walgreens, in the passenger compartment.

There was also a cell phone in the vehicle with several texts that referred to the meth process. Both men have been charged in the past for manufacturing methamphetamine. Officer Whitt made the arrests.

The victim further advised Amber accused him of looking at another girl sometime during the night and she began hitting him and bit him on the chest.

The officer noted in his report there was visible marks on the man's chest where he was bitten. He also had a red mark on his wrist.

Ms. Dixon was questioned about the altercation and she admitted to biting her boyfriend.

Poachers

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. — Four Tennessee men are facing a litany of federal and state charges for killing trophy sized white-tailed deer primarily off Fort Campbell Military Installation. Trespassing in the area where the crimes were committed is prohibited, but wooded habitat and a lack of hunting pressure creates an ideal home for mature and impressive bucks.

Tennessee and Kentucky agencies and Fort Campbell military police worked together to investigate what has apparently been years of poaching activity as the suspects actually risked their own lives by sneaking onto the impact area of Fort Campbell where the military has munitions training. Despite the dangers of entering an area where unexploded ordinance is common, the lure of bucks with massive antlers apparently created an overwhelming temptation.

"They were taking their chances and they were having success," noted Dale Grandstaff, who along with fellow Montgomery County officer Jereme Odom, helped apprehend two of the suspects on Nov. 26. A press conference was held Dec. 17 near Fort Campbell with the TWRA officers, two U.S. Fish and Wildlife officers, and a Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources officer available for the media.

"Deer are not endangered in Tennessee, but these guys were going onto an area where others aren't allowed to hunt and basically deciding that Fort Campbell's no trespassing signs didn't apply to them, nor did any wildlife laws," said Grandstaff. "There are a lot of real sportsmen who would like a chance to hunt big bucks, but they follow the rules."

Odom said many of the bucks were taken to a taxidermist and mounted as trophies, which only helped to "perpetuate" the illegal acts as the suspects' collection of big mounts grew.

"They were poaching, but they were showing these animals off as trophies to be proud of," said Odom. "Honest hunters would never take pride in killing a deer illegally, but we will probably always have a small percentage (of those) who cheat."

Odom said it was officers with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service stationed on Fort Campbell that notified him and Grandstaff (along with other agencies and military police) that they had spotted two men entering the impact area on the 26th.

A foot search eventually culminated with Grandstaff and Odom confronting 43-year-old Jim Edward Page of Clarksville. After a brief discussion with Page, the officers also got 45-year-old Curtis Wallace of Dover—who was pursuing deer in the same general location—to admit he was trespassing.

"This began several weeks of investigations that has led us to two more suspects," said Odom. "We have collected 41 deer mounts or antlers from the current suspect's homes and we are still investigating the case."

The investigation also turned up 43-year-old Wendell Taylor of the Big Rock community in Stewart County, and 41-year-old Gregory Crokarell of Dover.

"Taylor has similar charges as those that Page and Wallace are facing, while Crokarell has a couple of similar charges, but will also face aiding and abetting violations because we believe he took the deer to taxidermists for mounting," said Odom.

Wallace has already agreed to a settlement in Stewart County General Sessions Court on multiple charges. Wallace lost his hunting privileges for seven years, was ordered to pay court costs and fines of $2,500, was placed on one year of probation, and ordered to surrender his treasured deer mounts, worth thousands of dollars. Wallace also faces a long list of charges by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and possible charges by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Page and Taylor have general session court dates in January and face multiple charges of and have pending federal charges against them and possible prosecution coming from Kentucky officials. Crokarell has a general sessions court date set for January in Tennessee.

Fort Campbell Military Installation straddles the Tennessee and Kentucky state lines, a reason why so many agencies became involved in the investigation.

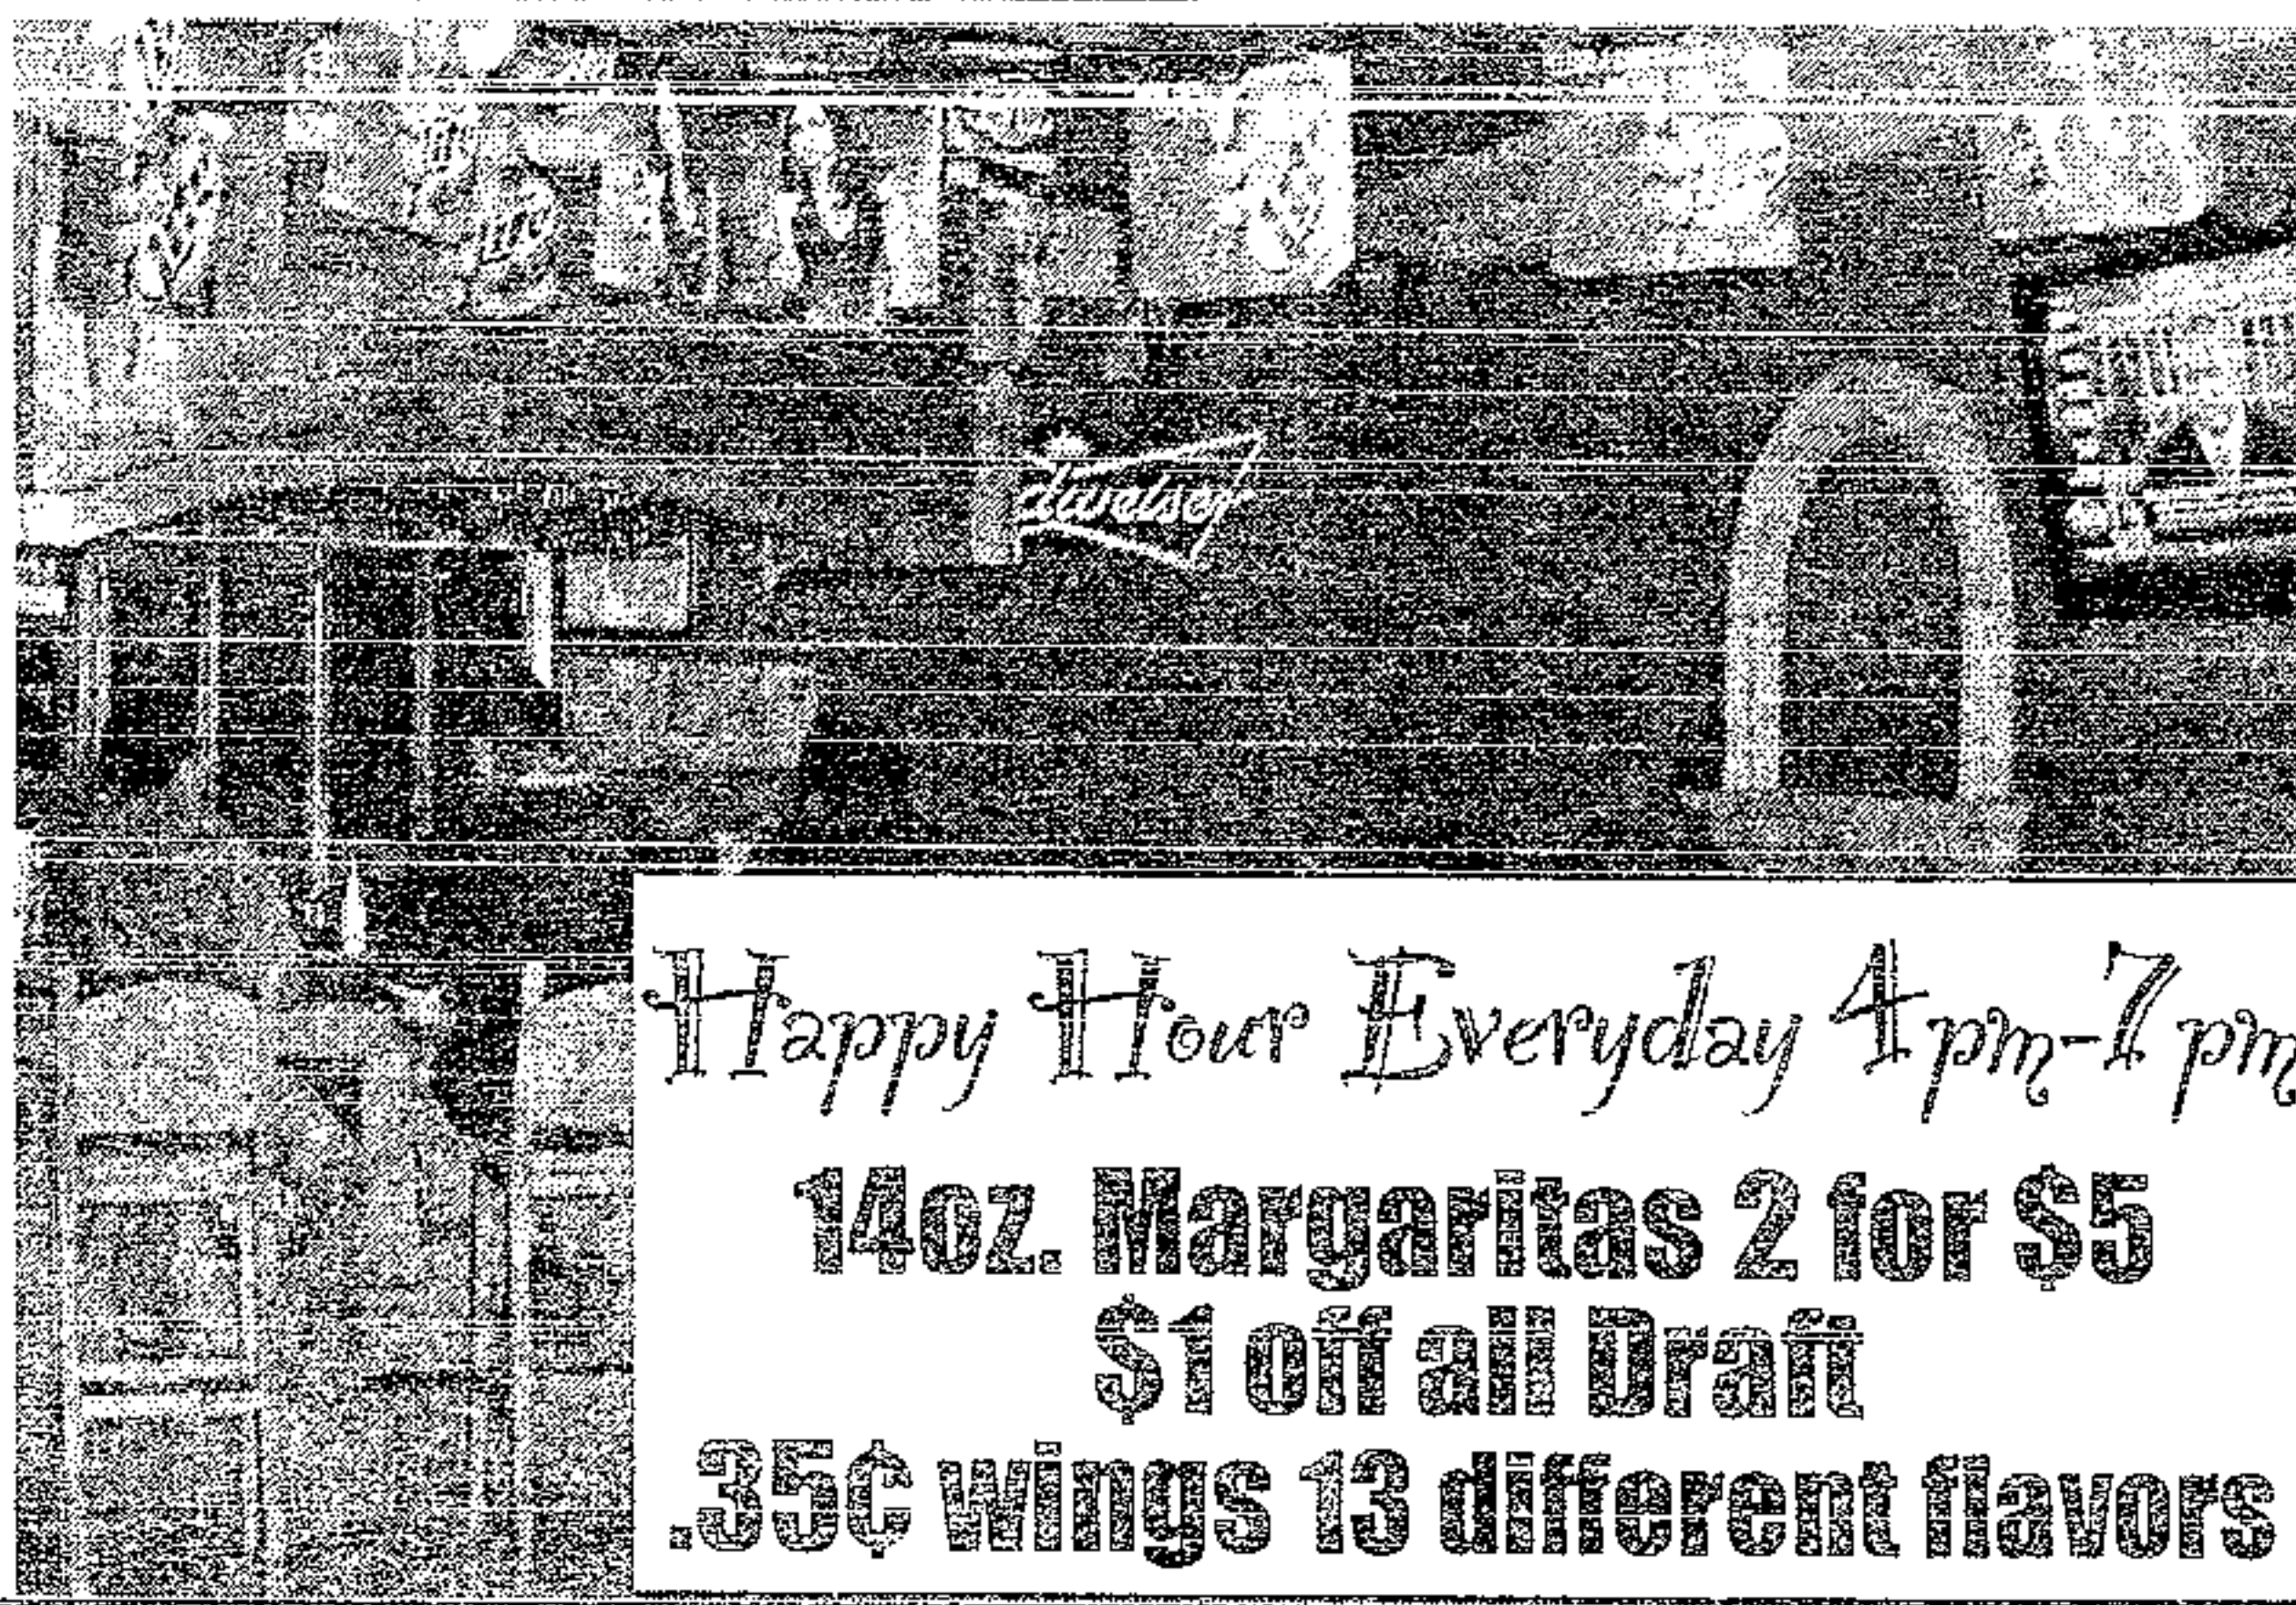

"This is one of the largest deer poaching busts ever made in Tennessee," noted Odom. "It certainly has to stand out as perhaps the largest big deer busts ever made. We appreciate all the agencies and personnel who have spent time on this case working to collect information."

According to reports, Saturday, around 4:20 AM, Loudon County 911 Center reported a green Mercedes without any lights on traveling south on Interstate 75. Sgt. R.S Newman, LPD responded to exit around 35 mph, then speeding up again before it began traveling in the center of both lanes.

Officer Sam Harrison, LPD was able to get in front of the Mercedes with his lights and siren on, but the driver still refused to stop and never turned his lights on.

Officer Harrison went on ahead of the vehicle and placed a spike strip down around exit 68. The vehicle finally slowed down and pulled to the shoulder after the tires began to go flat.

The driver, John Frank Guidry, was ordered out of the car. He had a strong odor of alcohol on his person and appeared to be intoxicated.

Mr. Guidry refused field sobriety tasks after he had a hard time starting the walk and turn task. He was transported to the Loudon County Jail where he was read the implied consent and refused.

72, spotted the Mercedes and immediately activated his blue lights and siren and fell in behind it.

The vehicle continued on, refusing to stop, and also changed lanes back and forth, slowing down to paraphernalia.

According to records, Sgt. William Evans. LPD observed a red Ford Mustang stop a full car length beyond the stop sign at Commerce and

When the officer stopped the Mustang he smelled an odor of marijuana emitting from it. The driver, Ms. Delozier admitted she smoked marijuana prior to being stopped. She performed poorly on all field sobriety tasks.
