Fire

Chrisman, who stated she came home from work around 12:00 PM on Monday and parked her vehicle. Chrisman said she had not been back outside to her vehicle until around 12:45 AM Tuesday when a man who lives in one of the apartments came home and saw smoke coming from it and knocked on her door.

Chrisman advised she went outside and opened the driver side door and when she did she saw smoke and flames coming from the passenger seat. She ran to her apartment and got a bowl of water and threw it on the seat. By that time, the fire was out of control.

The vehicle, a silver 2005 Ford Sport Trac pickup was a total loss. There was also damage to the apartment, roof, gutters, and siding. The landlord was notified.

The value of the damage was estimated at $17,500.

Jobs

and offer pay rates averaging $8-10 per hour. "These jobs provide opportunities for people to help with projects that are important to communities working to clean up and rebuild," said Labor Commissioner James Neeley. "This obviously is tough work; however, we've received calls from all over the state from motivated individuals who are looking for ways to help in the clean-up effort as well as earn an immediate income." The recent flooding has resulted in demand for a wide range of workers including general laborers, movers, plumbers, electricians and carpenters. Tennessee Career Centers take job orders directly from employers and screen prospective workers at no charge. In the last 12 months, the Tennessee Career Center system has served approximately 523,000 job seekers with more than 48,000 job listings. Jobs can be found on the Tennessee Department of Labor and Workforce Development's Internet site at www.tn.gov/labor-wfd or viewed at any Tennessee Career Center. Most applications must be completed in person at the Tennessee Career Center, or applicants will be directed to the proper contact with the employer. Applicants should bring identification such as driver's license or social security card. To find Tennessee Career Center nearest you, please call (615) 741-6749 or find a directory of locations at <http://www.tn.gov/labor-wfd/cc/>. The Tennessee Department of Labor and Workforce Development is committed to principles of equal opportunity, equal access, and affirmative action. Veal hend by members of the Lenoir City Police Department.

Brent Huel Veal, 26, Martel Road, Lenoir City was charged with theft under $500.

According to records, around 5:30 PM Tuesday, Brent Veal was observed by Dollar General Market employees as he concealed a digital camera, a radio, and 9 DVD's in the waistband of his shorts and under his shirt. The store manager called police and Veal removed the merchandise and fled the store on foot.

Sgt. Lynette Ladd and Officer Tony Park, LCPD located Mr. Veal fleeing from the scene and apprehended him under a stairway behind the Sports Complex.

Veal was returned to the business and identified as the shoplifter by store personnel.

The total value of the purloined items was $84.

Officer Jeremy Dishner, LCPD made the arrest.

Norman

tried to smother her with a pillow Monday evening.

The woman further advised on the way home earlier that night, Norman had a gun in his lap and was threatening to shoot her if she didn't keep her mouth shut.

The alleged victim said Norman placed her in fear for her life and for the welfare of their 3 year old child, and said the child, and her ten year old were both present when Norman choked and tried to smother her with the pillow.

Records indicate Sgt. Evans found a silver BB gun that looked like a real handgun during a search of the apartment and Norman admitted to showing his girlfriend the weapon and said it was in a non threatening way.

Officer April Farmer, LPD was also on scene.

Syndrome

These findings are in addition to those of WNS that were previously reported for Sullivan County and Montgomery County. Bats from Grindstaff Cave in Carter County, East Fork Saltpeter Cave in Fentress County and Camps Gulf Cave in Van Buren County have all tested positive for WNS. This announcement and the recent discovery of WNS in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, brings the total to six caves in Tennessee documented with WNS.

White-nose Syndrome is an infectious fungus attributed to killing over one million bats in the northeastern U.S. since it was first observed in 2006. The first documentation of WNS in Tennessee was confirmed in March 2010. Recently, WNS was also confirmed in Missouri and Ontario, Canada.

There have been no large bat mortalities observed in Tennessee, as yet. In the northeastern U.S., the large mortalities occurred in the second and third year after initial confirmation of WNS.

There have been no reported human illnesses attributed to WNS and there is currently no evidence to suggest that WNS is harmful to organisms other than bats.

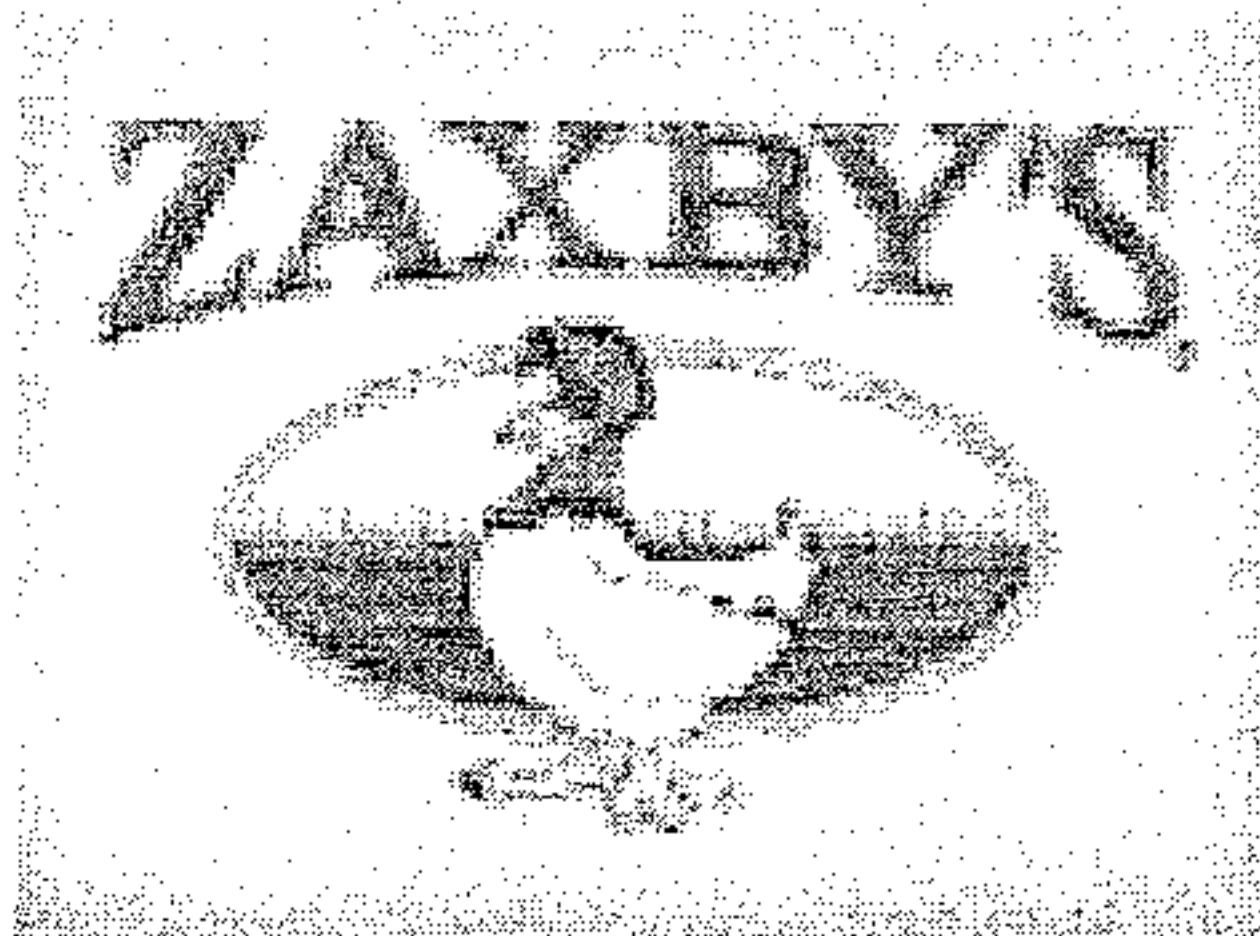

TWRA is working with federal and state agencies to help monitor Tennessee's caves for WNS as well as supporting on-going research efforts to find effective treatment methods. "Tennessee is a cave rich state and we have been blessed with a variety of bat species that make their home - at least part of the year - in our state. We want to do all we can to protect them," said Gina Hancock, associate state director, The Nature Conservancy's Tennessee Chapter.
