edly ran from when a witness told him the law was on the way.

Roberto Zavala-Garcia-Garcia, 33, San Isidro Drive, Sweetwater was charged with driving on suspended license, DUI, leaving the scene of an accident, and violation of implied consent law.

According to records, Friday, at approximately 9:24 PM, Officer

Bryan E. Blakney, LPD responded to a wreck at Carter Street and Steekee Street. While en route, the officer was advised the driver was possibly intoxicated and was leaving the scene.

Sgt. Mike Newman, LPD made contact with the suspected vehicle, a blue Honda Civic, and the driver began running from him. Sgt. Bill Evans, LPD cut him off and apprehended the man, identified as Roberto Zavala-Garcia, even though he resisted apprehension. Officer Blakney asked if he had been drinking, to which Zavala-Garcia replied he did not understand English. Field sobriety was not administered due to Zavala-Garcia's level of intoxication and a check of his license came back suspended.

Insurance Division Urges Residents to Review Insurance Coverage

NASHVILLE- Commerce and Insurance Commissioner Julie Mix McPeak suggests you take time to review how your insurance covers mishaps in the home and when traveling. Consider these scenarios as a starting point for reviewing your coverage limits, whether for the holidays or for every day:

•What happens if a relative drives your car and gets into an accident? Auto insurance coverage follows the vehicle. So your car will generally be covered while your relative is driving, the same as if you were driving.

The total value was $28. Detective Sartin made the arrest Friday.

•What happens if a guest at your party slips and falls on your icy driveway? Standard homeowners insurance policies provide limited medical payments coverage, if your guest seeks medical attention.

•What happens if your presents or valuables are stolen from your home? Standard homeowners insurance policies provide coverage subject to the deductible and special sub-limits for certain goods, such as electronics and jewelry.

•What if a candle causes a house fire? Your home and belongings should be covered if they are destroyed by a fire, subject to your deductible and policy limits.

•What if you lose your credit card and someone uses it to buy expensive items? Credit card theft might be covered as part of your credit card contract. Standard homeowners insurance policies typically provide up to $500 of coverage toward your legal obligation to pay your creditor. Federal law also limits a cardholder's responsibility, as long as the issuer of the card is promptly notified in accordance with contact terms.

•What if you travel out of state and need medical care? Most health insurance policies provide coverage for urgent care and emergency room visits while traveling, if they provide for such coverage at home. If you plan to travel, be sure to take your health insurance information for all family members. Before you leave town, check with your insurance company about in-network health-care providers at your destination.

•If you drive to Canada or Mexico, will your vehicle still be covered? You should check with your insurance agent to ensure that your auto insurance coverage will apply outside the United States. For more information, visit www.tn.gov/commerce/insurance.
