Movies on Market Square to show To Kill a Mockingbird this Friday

Pre-show newsreel features 1963 footage of Knoxville's Civil Rights protest

Knox County Public Library's Movies on Market Square will show To Kill A Mockingbird this Friday. October 17 in downtown Knoxville. The free outdoor movie will start at dusk. Movie goers should bring a blanket or lawn chair for the event. Prior to the presentation of the feature film, the Library will screen a 3-minute newsreel compilation from TAMIS, its archive of moving image and sound. Much of the news footage being shown was taken during Civil Rights protests in 1963 in front of the Tennessee Theatre when To Kill A Mockingbird was first released to the public.

The 1963 classic movie is based on the Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by the same name. Set in 1930s rural Alabama, Atticus Finch is asked to defend a black man in a rape trial against a white woman, played by former Knoxville resident, Collin Wilcox. Through the young eyes of Scout and Jem Finch, Harper Lee explores with rich humor and unswerving honesty the irrationality of adult attitudes toward race and class in the Deep South of the 1930s. The conscience of a town steeped in prejudice, violence, and hypocrisy is pricked by the stamina and quiet heroism of one man's struggle for justice--but the weight of history will only tolerate so much.

NEXT WEEK: On

Friday, October 24, the Library will close out the 11th annual movie series with O Brother, Where Art Thou, which was rescheduled due to rain from its original date on October 10.
