Knoxville man sentenced to 3 years in prison for defrauding his elderly great aunt

On Aug. 27, 2014, Mark Kevin Tudor, 42, of Knoxville, Tenn., was sentenced to serve 36 months in federal prison by the Honorable Pamela L. Reeves, U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee. Tudor pleaded guilty in April 2014 to federal wire fraud charges.

As part of the sentence imposed, upon his release from prison Tudor will be on supervised release for a period of three years. The Court further ordered Tudor to pay the victim $266,227.80 in restitution.

The investigation determined that Tudor abused a position of trust after having been granted a power-of-attorney by his 93 year-old great aunt, who suffered from a visual disability and needed assistance with her financial affairs. Without his great aunt's permission or authority, Tudor systematically depleted the victim's bank and credit union account and life insurance policy. In total, Tudor stole over $267,000 from the victim before the fraud was discovered, which nearly depleted the victim's life savings. According to a written statement by the victim read in court, when the victim discovered the fraud only $347 remained in her credit union account, which had held over $200,000 before the theft.

U.S. Attorney William C. Killian emphasized the importance of the prosecution of fraud committed against the elderly. "Senior citizens are among the most vulnerable members of our society to financial crimes. Those who take advantage of the trust placed in them by the elderly, by defrauding them in violation of federal law, will be investigated and prosecuted," said Killian.

This case was jointly investigated by the Knoxville Police Department and the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. Assistant U.S. Attorney Matthew Morris represented the United States.

Buyers Eager to Purchase $345 Million in Tennessee Higher Education Facilities Bonds

The Tennessee State School Bond Authority has just completed the sale of $345 million of higher education facilities bonds to finance the costs of projects for the state's higher education system. Tennessee's excellent credit stimulated heavy interest from bond buyers, allowing bonds to be sold at historically low rates.

The School Bond Authority sold $132 million in 2014 Series A taxable bonds at a true interest cost of 3.59%. The bonds included new money and refunding bonds, the proceeds of which will repay a revolving credit facility, finance additional project costs, and refinance certain bonds outstanding. The refinancing will save the state's higher educational institutions more than $6 million.

The School Bond Authority also sold $213 million of 2014 Series B tax-exempt refunding bonds. The true interest cost of 2.81% will result in an additional $17.8 million savings to the institutions. Buyer interest in the bonds allowed the School Bond Authority to reprice most of the maturities on the bonds from 5 to 10 basis points lower than the price that was initially offered.

"This may be the most extraordinary sale in the Authority's history," said Tennessee Comptroller Justin P. Wilson. "These low interest rates are a testament to the financial management and integrity of Tennessee's higher education system and institutions. Taxpayers should be proud of this incredibly successful sale and the savings to the state's institutions."

The bonds were rated AA+ by Fitch Ratings, Aa1 by Moody's Investor Service, and AA by Standard & Poor's. All of the bonds have stable outlooks.
