International Operations Building Partnerships in the Americas

Members of the FBI's International Operations Division who work in North, Central, and South America carry out their mission in some of the most violent countries in the world and face criminal threats—such as drug cartels and transnational gangs—that spill across borders and threaten the safety of Americans at home and abroad.

Some of the most potent weapons against these threats are strong and lasting partnerships—not only among U.S. federal agencies but also with international allies.

“In the Americas, the drug dealers, gangs, and human traffickers do not recognize borders,” explained Special Agent David Brassanini, chief of the Americas Unit in the FBI's International Operations Division. “That is why partnerships with our host countries and fellow federal agencies are so important. We can only fight these violent criminals through strong alliances," he said, adding that while many Americans think of the FBI as primarily a domestic law enforcement organization, "our presence abroad is strong, as it must be to protect the homeland."

At a recent conference at the United States Southern Command (SOUTHCOM) military headquarters in Florida were the FBI's legal attachés—or legats—who cover the Americas: the Bureau has offices in Argentina, Barbados, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Mexico, and Panama. Holding the conference at a Department of Defense (DOD) facility was fitting, because the military is a key FBI partner in the Americas. Both organizations have personnel cross-assigned in liaison roles so that intelligence can be shared seamlessly and operations can be carried out jointly. "The Bureau and the DOD tend to look at threats the same way and seek to disrupt and dismantle them by working together," said an FBI agent stationed at SOUTHCOM, one of nine combatant commands within the DOD. "SOUTHCOM's most important mission is to protect the southern approaches to the United States," said Gen. John F. Kelly, SOUTHCOM commander. "We do not and cannot do this mission alone. We work side by side with the FBI and other law enforcement professionals to defend the U.S. homeland against transnational criminal networks, illicit trafficking, and the threat of terrorism." Participants at the conference—including other federal law enforcement agencies—were briefed on recent investigations and a variety of criminal trends relating to (see FBI ctd. pg. 7)

Tipton County Receives Clean Audit Report

The Tennessee Comptroller of the Treasury is recognizing a significant achievement by Tipton County government leaders and elected officials.

The Tipton County audit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2015 contains no findings.

This is a testament to Tipton County's commitment to a strong system of internal controls, which are the checks and balances put in place to help government achieve its objectives and reduce risk.

"Tipton County leaders and its citizens can be proud of this exemplary audit report," said Comptroller Justin P. Wilson. "By reducing risk, establishing strong policies, and following best practices, Tipton County can now claim to have one of the strongest systems of county government in the state."

The Tennessee Comptroller's Office audits 89 of Tennessee's 95 counties. Last year only two of the 89 counties (Hamblen and Robertson) received clean audit reports. Tipton County's 2014 audit report contained only one finding, which has now been corrected.

Tipton County's audit is the first FY 2015 report released by the Comptroller's Office that contains no audit findings.

terrorism, cyber intrusions, espionage, and more. The overwhelming crime issues in the Americas stem from transnational gangs and criminal organizations that traffic in drugs and people. These groups routinely murder, extort, and commit other crimes in the region, and those crimes have an impact inside the United States.

"The gang violence in Central America, particularly in El Salvador, has really taken off lately," Brassanini said, "and we have seen an influx of that violence to the U.S. In many cases, Central American gang leaders are ordering crimes and murders committed in the U.S."

Being vigilant about crime in the Americas is important because the countries there are U.S. "touch points," Brassanini said. "The Americas touch us by land and by sea," he explained. "That is why we work so closely with our partners to share intelligence, provide training, and bring these criminals to justice."

The partnerships are working. "Our accomplishments are significant," Brassanini said. "Almost on a daily basis we are able to identify and track down violent criminals, and that makes all our countries safer."

Loudon County Sheriff's Office Toys for Tots 2015

Thanks to the generosity year after year of the Loudon County residents, churches, businesses and industries, the Loudon County Sheriff's Office is once again able to offer the Toys for Tots program. We are beginning our 31st year of providing toys to the needy children of Loudon County, and thanks to generous contributions of time, money and gifts, we are able to make Christmas a more joyful time for more and more children. In 2014, approximately 500 children were helped by the Loudon County Sheriff's Department Toys for Tots program through their partners. Even with the difficult economic times we are experiencing, we hope that the people of Loudon County will be there once again to help.

If your business or church would be willing to take names please call Debbie Hines, Toys for Tots Coordinator at 986-4823.

Names are available through business and churches. If you are considering helping a child this Christmas, please be assured that applicants are thoroughly checked to make sure they require this assistance. Names are also compared with the school systems to make sure no one is receiving duplicate assistance.
