sion of mine. I have an organized mess of boards about fitness, quotes, beauty secrets, fashion, recipes, and craft projects....just to name a few. I like to think Pinterest gives us non-crafty people the opportunity to borrow ideas from the Martha Stewarts of the world and call them our own. As much as I love this social media site, I do have to remind myself that it is a guilty obsession for a reason. Too often, I catch myself wishing I had a life like those on Pinterest boards, consisting of a designer styled home with an endless wardrobe, and a model's body. This fixation fuels envy and discontentment within the heart. James 3:14-16 states "If you have bitter jealousy and selfish ambition in your hearts, do not boast and be false to the truth. This is not the wisdom that comes down from above, but is earthly, unspiritual, demonic. For where jealousy and selfish ambition exist, there will be disorder and every vile practice." The Bible clearly tells us that going down a path of envy will only lead to self-destruction. The society of today has encouraged discontentment because we are persuaded to believe we must look, dress, and have certain things in order to fit in. We get so caught up in trying to have the best of everything so much that we forget the things God has blessed us with.

When I first got contacts in the 8th grade, I begged my mom to let me get color contacts. She of course said no! I had this idea in my head that in order to be beautiful I must have blue eyes. For years, I hated the fact I had been born with green eyes. Van Morrison wrote probably the most famous song about a brown eyed girl and then there were plenty of other songs about blue eyed beauties but, never anything about a girl with green eyes. As I was sitting on my couch in another Pinterest induced coma, I suddenly stopped at an interesting post indicating only 2% of the world's entire population has green eyes. While I cannot verify the validity of this fact, it did make me realize something extremely important. God has made each and every one of us unique. He has called each of us to do a unique work for him so why wouldn't he design each of us uniquely as well? I spent years wishing I could change my eye color but, today I am thankful that God made me the way he did. He gave me a feature that is unique to only a small portion of the population. I was his design, and his design alone.

Today, I challenge you to love a difficult part of yourself. Don't allow society to tell you how you should look or who you should be. Your self-worth is not defined by the world but, by you and you alone. Learn to appreciate the blessings, no matter how big or small you have in life for it is in the blessings we find happiness. Discontentment will only leave you unsatisfied.

Suzan Rhea Burnett - of Lenoir City passed through this life for 61 years bringing a "rhea" of sunshine to everyone in her path, even on a cloudy day. She was the eldest Burnett child born to Raymond and Freda Burnett, and, along with her siblings, Sandra, Stephen, and Sara, brought happiness and love to the Burnett household. She was cherished as a daughter, big sister, and as a devoted aunt, and will be remembered both for her quick wit, as well as her enthusiasm for whatever adventure awaited - whether it be an outing to a new place, or just a quiet afternoon helping with her nephews and nieces' homework. The greatest joys in her life were time spent with her family especially with her nieces and nephews. Suzan was a proud alumna of Tennessee Technological University and a staunch supporter of anything Purple and Gold. Suzan spent her professional career as a special education teacher in the Knox County and Roane County school systems. Suzan was an extraordinary friend to her Omega Phi Alpha sorority sisters, her "Purple Ladies", and many others for whom her affection was endless. Suzan was preceded in death by her father, Raymond Burnett. She is survived by her mother, Freda Burnett of Lenoir City; sisters, Sandra Burnett of Mechanicsville, Virginia, Sara Burnett Park and family (Chris, Hayden, Emily,
