The Good News

What is Your Price?

by James Harrison

Matthew 16:26: "For what profit is it to a man if he gains the whole world, and loses his own soul? Or what will a man give in exchange for his soul?"

The television show Fear Factor is based on the idea that everyone has a price. If the price is right, anyone will do anything at any given time – from eating live slugs to being placed in a glass coffin with thousands of snakes, worms and hissing cockroaches. Every week millions of viewers tune in to see if people just like them would be willing to (see TGN pg. 3)

ISIL Defacements Exploiting WordPress Vulnerabilities

Summary

Continuous Web site defacements are being perpetrated by individuals sympathetic to the Islamic State in the Levant (ISIL) a.k.a. Islamic State of Iraq and al-Shams (ISIS). The defacements have affected Web site operations and the communication platforms of news organizations, commercial entities, religious institutions, federal/state/local governments, foreign governments, and a variety of other domestic and international Web sites. Although the defacements demonstrate low-level hacking sophistication, they are disruptive and often costly in terms of lost business revenue and expenditures on technical services to repair infected computer systems.

Technical Details

Researchers continue to identify WordPress Content Management System (CMS) plug-in vulnerabilities, which could allow malicious actors to take control of an affected system. Some of these vulnerabilities were exploited in the recent Web site defacements noted above. Software patches are available for identified vulnerabilities.

Successful exploitation of the vulnerabilities could result in an attacker gaining unauthorized access, bypassing security restrictions, injecting scripts, and stealing cookies from computer systems or network servers. An attacker could install malicious software; manipulate data; or create new accounts with full user privileges for future Web site exploitation.

Threat

The FBI assesses that the perpetrators are not members of the ISIL terrorist organization. These individuals are conquer their fears for money. A person selling-out themselves has proven to be amusing and profitable for network television. It's one thing to ask someone how much it would cost for them to wear a silly outfit in public or parachute out of an airplane or eat something gross. These things are morally neutral. But there are some things that shouldn't ever have a price – things like integrity, honesty, morality, our commitment to God and to our family. These things are not a game. Every person should periodically ask, "Do I have a price? What would it take for me to compromise?"

It would be nice to think that followers of Christ do not have a price, and that with their initial one-time commitment to Jesus, comes a lifelong, resolute loyalty. However, that is not always the case. It is not uncommon to find people who claim to be Christians cheating on their taxes, padding their expense accounts, stealing from their workplace, and doing whatever it takes by hook or crook to get their desires. It is a bad trade-off. A righteous person's commitment to God should be such that he or she will obey Him no matter what he or she is offered to compromise.

King Saul, the leader who had everything a nation would want, lacked such commitment. When the pressure was on, Saul disobeyed specific instructions from God and spared a king and the best of his livestock (1 Samuel 15). That was Saul's price – a defeated king to gloat over and a herd of animals. Saul thought he could rationalize away God's clear instructions. But notice how the Lord responds: "Then the word of the Lord came to Samuel: 'I am grieved that I have made Saul king, because he has turned away from me and has not carried out my instructions.'"

Saul had a character flaw; he was more concerned about gaining honor and prestige in the eyes of men than in pleasing God. It was his insecurity that caused him to rationalize his rebellion. When the Prophet Samuel questioned him, Saul said, "I have carried out the Lord's instructions." But Samuel said, "What then is this bleating of the sheep in my ears?" Saul answered, "The soldiers brought the best of the sheep and cattle to sacrifice to the Lord your God." Saul was layering lie upon lie upon lie. He said he had carried out the Lord's instructions, but he hadn't. Saul said it was the soldiers who had done the wrong thing, but they were following his instructions. It was his fault, not their sin. And then he had the gall to say, "We're saving these animals to sacrifice to God."

It's always fascinating to hear people rationalize their disobedience. Perhaps the worst example is Moses' brother Aaron (Exodus 32). Moses went up the mountain to get the law, and the people grew impatient. They became rebellious and wanted some idols that they could worship. When the people saw that Moses was so long in coming down from the mountain, they gathered around Aaron and said, "Come, make us gods who will go before us. As for this fellow Moses who brought us up out of Egypt, we don't know what has happened to him."

Aaron told them to bring him their gold earrings and jewelry. He took what they handed him and made it into an idol cast in the shape of a calf, fashioning it with a tool. Then they said, this is the god who brought us out of Egypt. When Moses came down from the mountain and saw what was going on, he asked his brother, how did this happen? Where did this thing come from? Aaron answered, they gave me the gold, and I threw it into the fire, and out came this calf!

It is unbelievable the lengths to which people will go to justify their rebellion. "I just threw the gold in the fire, and out came this calf!" How preposterous. We want to grab Aaron by the collar, shake him, and ask: How stupid do you think God is? But before we get too puffed up with righteous indignation, perhaps we should examine some of our own rationalizations. Our excuses probably sound just as lame when they are spoken out loud. "God wants me to be happy doesn't He?" "She just wasn't meeting my needs." "It was only a little white lie." Try saying those at the foot of the cross and you'll hear how absurd they sound.

The Bible never says God wants you to be happy; it does say He wants you to be holy.

He wants you to be like Christ. That will lead to happiness ultimately, but it doesn't work the other way around. The quest for happiness will never lead to a life of holiness. The quest for holiness will lead to a life characterized by love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control. These come as a byproduct of pursuing God above all else.

In closing, are you selling your soul? What is your price?

Father Lord, help us to be honest with ourselves and ask the hard question. Am I selling out my integrity, character, and morality for the temporary things of this life? And when we truthfully face the facts, let us immediately seek forgiveness and restoration into Your grace and mercy. Help us live exemplary lives so that others can see Jesus in us. In His name we humbly pray, amen."

God loves you very much!

In His service,
James Harrison
