Economic Espionage

FBI Launches Nationwide Awareness Campaign

Industries in the United States spend more on research and development than any other country in the world. The amount of effort and resources put into developing a unique product or process that can provide an edge in the business world is not un-substantial. But what happens if someone comes in and steals that edge—a company's trade secrets—for the benefit of a foreign country? The damages could severely undermine the victim company and include lost revenue, lost employment, damaged reputation, lost investment for research and development, interruption in production—it could even result in the company going out of business.

It's called economic espionage, and it's a problem that costs the American economy billions of dollars annually and puts our national security at risk. While it is not a new threat, it is a growing one, and the theft attempts by our foreign competitors and adversaries are becoming more brazen and more varied in their approach.

Historically, economic espionage has been leveled mainly at defense-related and high-tech industries. But recent FBI cases have shown that no industry, large or small, is immune to the threat. Any company with a proprietary product, process, or idea can be a target; any unprotected trade secret is ripe for the taking by those who wish to illegally obtain innovations to increase their market share at a victim company's expense.

To raise awareness of the issue, the FBI, in collaboration with the National Counterintelligence and Security Center, has launched a nationwide campaign and released a short film aimed at educating businesses, industry leaders, and anyone with a trade secret about the threat and how they can help mitigate it. Based on an actual case, The Company Man: Protecting America's Secrets illustrates how one U.S. company was targeted by foreign actors and how that company worked with the FBI to resolve the problem and bring the perpetrators to justice.

The Bureau has provided more than 1,300 in-person briefings on the economic espionage threat to companies and industry leaders over the past year, using The Company Man as a training tool. But through this campaign, the FBI hopes to expand the scope of the audience to include a wider range of industry representatives, trade associations, and smaller companies and encourage them to come forward if they suspect they are a victim of economic espionage.

Understandably, companies are often hesitant to reach out for help when faced with a potential threat of this nature, usually because they don't want to risk their trade secrets being disclosed in court or compromised in any way. But the FBI will do all it can to minimize business disruption and safeguard privacy and data during its investigation and will seek protective orders to preserve trade secrets and business confidentiality whenever possible. The Department of Justice also has a variety of protections in place to ensure that sensitive information is protected throughout any criminal prosecution.

Each of the FBI's 56 field offices has a strategic partnership coordinator (SPC) whose role is to proactively develop relationships with local companies, trade groups, industry leaders, and others so that if an incident occurs, a liaison has already been established. To report suspected economic espionage-related activity, please contact the SPC at your local FBI field office or submit a tip at tips.fbi.gov.

advised that the female, described as being a white female wearing jeans and a black shirt, had a knife and she had left the residence on foot towards Philadelphia School. Cpl. Branam and Deputy Bobby Hamilton made contact with the female on the front porch of Spring Street. The female gave the last name of Pupo, and when asked what happened she stated that she had not done anything to anyone. Deputy then responded to Spring Street where he spoke with the victim, who stated that "Maggie" came to her residence with a knife and threatened to stab her. Deputy did find a silver handled kitchen knife at the bottom of the steps at victim residence.

Deputy then returned to Spring Street to speak with Ms. Pupo and asked her what had happened again. She again stated nothing happened and when Deputy asked her what her full name was she gave a name of Maggie Taylor. At that time

Deputy attempted to place the female under arrest for Aggravated Assault but she began trying to pull away from officers. At that time Cpl. Branam and Deputy Bobby Hamilton took Ms. Pupo to the ground to attempt to place her under arrest. After a brief struggle on the ground Pupo was placed in to custody without further incident. Deputy Hamilton then transported the female, later identified as Margaret Heather Pupo, to the Loudon County Jail where she was charged with Aggravated Assault, and Resisting Stop, Halt, Search. This did occur in Loudon County, TN. Deputy Bobby Hamilton LCSO, made the arrest.

mined if Mr. Hinds was left to walk he would be a danger to himself and or the public. Mr. Hinds was placed under arrest for public intoxication. While on the way to the jail Mr. Hinds stated that he lied to me about his name and his name was actually Brandon Hinds. Mr. Hinds was also charged with criminal impersonation. This did occur in Loudon County TN. Deputy Kenneth Palmer LCSO, made the arrest.
