Man Sentenced for Distributing Avionics Trade Secrets

For an aircraft electronics company looking to ramp up production, Derek Wai Hung Tam Sing must have seemed like a dream hire—20 years of experience as an electrical engineer and an extensive résumé.

But the Glendale, California resident turned out to be a nightmare for his employer, Rogerson Kratos.

Sing was hired by the Pasadena-based firm in April 2012 to improve out behind the wheel with the keys in the ignition and his seatbelt on deputy was able to get Mr. Stiles woke up.

Mr. Stiles had blood shot eyes and slurred speech. Deputy then observed a clear plastic baggy in Mr. Stiles left hand with several pills inside and two large cans of Bud Light one unopened. Deputy then had Mr. Stiles exit the vehicle at which time he observed that Mr. Stiles had urinated on himself and that his pants where unzipped. Mr. stiles stated that he had a prescription for the pills but could not produce a pill bottle and stated that the pills where in the bag because he wanted to scare his wife that he had been arguing with in Sweetwater. Mr. Stiles gave consent to search the vehicle and while Sgt. Watkins was searching Deputy found a separate baggy inside the bag of pills that consisted of a clear crystal substance. Mr.

Stiles stated to Sgt. Watkins it was Ice and stated that he had smoked about 50.00 dollars worth earlier. Upon weighing the Methamphetamine it weighed approximately 4

Keving Michael Pippin sentenced to 124 months in prison for child pornography offenses On June 22, 2016, Kevin Michael Pippin, 41, of Knoxville, Tenn., was sentenced by the Honorable R. Leon Jordan, Senior U.S. District Judge, to serve 124 months in prison for distributing and possessing child pornography. Following his release from prison, he will be supervised by the U.S. Probation Office for 15 years and required to register with the sex offender registry in any state in which he resides, works, or attends school.

Pippin pleaded guilty in July 2015 to federal charges stemming from an undercover investigation into distribution of child pornography via peer-to-peer file sharing software on the Internet. After undercover investigators downloaded child pornography from Pippin's computer, a federal search warrant was executed at his residence. A forensic examination of his computer equipment revealed that he had collected thousands of images and 82 videos of child pornography. A large assortment of the depictions of child abuse collected by Pippin was available for download by others from his computer through the use of the peer-to-peer software.

During the sentencing hearing, Judge Jordan remarked that the "staggering" number of images of child pornography the defendant had collected justified, in part, the length of the of the prison sentence.

This investigation was conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorney Matthew Morris represented the United States.

This case was brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice. Led by U.S. Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section, Project Safe Childhood marshals federal, state and local resources to better locate, apprehend and prosecute individuals who exploit children via the Internet, as well as to identify and rescue victims. avionics systems and circuit boards that would ultimately end up in military helicopters. Before starting work with the company, Rogerson Kratos required Sing to sign a confidentiality agreement prohibiting him from sharing trade secrets with anyone outside the company.

Despite the agreement, Sing stole and distributed product schematics to several competitors, violating the Economic Espionage Act. The crimes resulted in an investigation by the FBI, which ended up landing Sing in federal prison.

ing home a treasure trove of work files and project photos," said Special Agent Michael Fitzpatrick, who investigated the case out of the FBI's Los Angeles Field Office. "He never had permission to do that and wasn't following company protocols."

In the seven months that Sing was employed at the company, he often missed project deadlines, struggled with tardiness, pushed back on leadership decisions, and ridiculed fellow employees.

Sing's unprofessional behavior and poor work performance got him fired in November 2012. Disgruntled over the company's actions, he set on a vengeful mission—according to his testimony at trial, he "wanted to get back at Rogerson Kratos" for being unappreciative of his efforts.

"Harming Rogerson Kratos for what they did to him was a top priority for Sing," said Fitzpatrick. "He had the advantage of possessing their trade secrets and the means to distribute them widely to competitors."

In December 2012, Sing packaged up seven different product schematics along with files that explained the importance of the proprietary information and instructions on how to reverse-engineer the products. In early 2013, he used fictitious e-mail accounts to send the stolen trade secrets to domestic and foreign companies that produced avionics products.

One overseas recipient of Sing's communications realized the files contained stolen trade secrets, determined the information belonged to Rogerson Kratos, and alerted the company. In turn, Rogerson Kratos contacted authorities, which led to the FBI opening an investigation in February 2013. Through a series of search warrants, evidence-gathering, and interviews, agents found Sing to be the source of the leaked trade secrets.

"Rogerson Kratos would have faced millions of dollars in lost revenue if any of the companies that received Sing's files actually took advantage of them," said Fitzpatrick. "If it wasn't for the ethical decision-making of one organization, untold damage could have been committed."

Sing was arrested and indicted in April 2014 following the FBI investigation. In December 2015, he was convicted of 32 counts of violating the Economic Espionage Act by stealing trade secrets from his former employer. On June 6, 2016, the 45-year-old was sentenced to one year and one day in prison for his crimes.

Country

People in the South have always had a reputation for home cooking and comfort food. Country Kinfolk Farms Marketplace & Cafe in Lenoir City is no exception. The Daily Edition staff sat down with Cindy & Cee Cee from Country Kinfolk to talk about their food, their store, and their new barn event center. "The cafe has been open about 2 years and the store has been open since 2011," Cindy said. After being shown the barn that is being converted into an event facility, the people of Loudon County will be amazed. "My son will be getting married here in the fall and we hope to have more weddings & events as soon as it's finished." The barn has an American flag metal roof, and the inside will have benches as well as a large porch area. Country Kinfolk will also offer catering to anyone that uses their event barn. As far as the cafe is concerned, the food is wonderful. Everything is made from scratch, and it is a family-run business. The atmosphere reminds you of being at grandma's house. Sweet tea is served in mason jars, the menu is on small chalkboards, and some of the tables & benches are made from old doors. The specials change daily, but the staff says their most sold items are the chicken salad sandwich, potato salad, and the earthquake cake. We recommend the fried green tomato sandwich! The baked goods are made fresh from scratch daily
