Henley

Nashville, - Hunter Henley has been named as the 2007 Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency Fisheries Biologist of the Year. Henley received the award at the November meeting of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Commission.

Henley began his career with TWRA in the Region 1 stream survey crew in 1996. In 1997, he was promoted to Manager of the Humboldt Fish Hatchery in West Tennessee.

After he became the Humboldt Hatchery manager, he immediately started to improve the ability of Humboldt Hatchery to once again become an integral part of the statewide hatchery system. His ideas improved the total fish yield of the hatchery from the very first year. His "can do" attitude infected the others at the hatchery that more could be done at this facility. Thus began the "silent" expansion of Humboldt Hatchery and over the next three years Henley and the hatchery crew installed five new production ponds, using funds that were for the everyday operation of the hatchery and at no additional cost to TWRA.

Realizing that with the right equipment additional ponds could be built relatively inexpensively, Hunter began to inquire about purchasing additional land near the existing hatchery to expand the facility and in March 2007, 30 acres were purchased for the expansion project. His first year goal was to build four ponds and a reservoir, but as of this month, the crew had already built seven ponds and the water supply reservoir. His new goal is to have the entire hatchery of 20 production ponds completed by the end of 2008, three years ahead of schedule. In addition to his duties with the hatchery, Henley is also responsible for the management of Davy Crockett and Gibson County Lakes.

Frozen Fruits and Vegetables

During the winter months when fruits and vegetables aren't at their peak, most turn to the freezer aisle to stock up. Remember these tips when shopping for frozen fruits and vegetables this winter:

* To control fat and calories, choose frozen plain vegetables or those made with low-fat sauces.

* Frozen fruits come in both sweetened and unsweetened varieties, so make sure to check the label.

* To help frozen fruit keep its shape, serve while it's still partially frozen.

* Frozen fruit bars make a nutritious snack. Read the label to learn if they're made with real fruit juice or flavored water.

* Buy fruit and vegetables in loose-pack plastic bags, use what you need and freeze the rest.

Don't let the fact that fruit and vegetables are out of season be an excuse for not getting your fill.
