Cell Phones

guaranteed. That was the mid-1980s, in the early days of cellular service, when the technology was an expensive and unwieldy proposition.

East Tennessee's introduction into the "cellular age" started in 1985, when a group of entrepreneurs began building a network literally from the ground up and changed the way phone calls were made forever.

"It truly was like the wild west," said Bill Arnett, former regional general manager for what was then known as United States Cellular. "There was no guidebook back then, just a lot of trial and error."

Arnett and a small team of engineers agreed to help build what they thought was going to be a "turnkey" network of cell sites in East Tennessee. It turned out, only the switches and wires were ready-made from a company in Japan. Arnett and his co-workers wound up having to build the first seven cell towers in the region from the ground up, including negotiating for the land. "We had some people who were really easy to deal with, and others who didn't want us around," he said.

But with persistence and diplomacy the towers were built and the stage was set for a grand unveiling of the new technology.

In July of 1985, the first cell phone call from Knoxville was both a triumph and a spectacle. A few hundred people gathered at the Hyatt hotel, which later became the Marriott, to see and hear what this new technology was all about. However, most prominent political figures stayed away, fearful of being associated with the risky venture. Their skepticism was no secret according to Arnett. "One well-known resident who shall remain nameless asked me, 'Once you've sold this to the 500 people who can afford it, what then?'"

Early cell phone models were bulky units housed mainly in the trunks of automobiles, and the first customers included doctors, lawyers and real estate agents. As technology improved and became more affordable, more people did become cell phone owners. Today, cell phones are available for under $100 and nationwide coverage is the industry standard. East Tennessee is considered to have over 100 percent saturation. That means as more people carry multiple cell phones for both work and home use, there are more cell phones than people in the region.

"We were the pioneers in bringing cell service to the people of Tennessee," said Tom Catani, regional vice president of U.S. Cellular®. "Today, we continue our commitment to excellent customer service, and our presence in this region is stronger than ever."

U.S. Cellular is the nation's sixth-largest wireless service carrier, providing wireless service to six million customers in 26 states. The Chicago-based company employs 8,000 associates and operates on a customer satisfaction strategy, meeting customer needs by providing a comprehensive range of wireless products and services, superior customer support, and a high-quality network.

Eula Martin, was born May 1, 1916, and married Guy V. Martin in April of 1941. Her husband, to whom she was indeed a true wife and helpmate, and by whose side she stood so many years, predeceased her. She was the light of his home and joy of his life. She was a noble, devout Christian woman who faced trials and troubles that would have broken the will of one without her faith. Her ability to face troubles and dangers with resolute courage, while managing to serve her family, church and friends with such a gentle spirit, mirrored the template of a Christian life instilled in her through prayer and cast by an ancestry of Christian believers, including her grandfather, the late Rev. Ripley Kizziah Benson, minister of Baptist churches in Salem, Nettleboro, and near Fulton, AL. She lived long
