more than 90 days, they could lose their license(s).

"It is simply unconscionable for parents to shirk their responsibility and not support their children," said Human Services Commissioner Gina Lodge. "These parents have shown us that they are not willing to abide by the court's order, so we will use the license revocation program to get their attention. It's a strong incentive and a proven, effective tool for the collection of overdue support."

Parents who face the loss of their driver's, professional or recreational licenses include dentists, doctors, boxers, teachers, salesmen and security guards. The largest amount of overdue support subject to license revocation is from a parent in Knox County owing $209,000. Other top offenders owing more than $100,000 come from Obion, Williamson, Shelby and Davidson Counties. In all, the 14,000 parents owe a combined $187 million in overdue child support.

State and federal law allows DHS, which administers the Child Support Program, to revoke the licenses of parents who fail to pay their child support. The notices inform parents that they can prevent revocation if they contact their local child support office and set up payment plans, or repay the past due amount. Traditionally, half of the parents who receive notices end up working with DHS to pay off their child support obligation. However, last year more than 8,000 licenses were revoked due to failure to pay.

This year, data matches between DHS and the Department of Safety identified more than 16,000 driver's licenses of persons meeting the requirements for revocation of their licenses. More than 400 professional licenses issued by the Departments of Commerce and Insurance, Health and Education are also at risk. Approximately 1,000 hunting and fishing licenses will also be subject to revocation.

In addition to the license revocation program, the Child Support division and its partners use enforcement tools such as administrative wage assignment, liens and passport denial to collect support. There are currently 260,000 child support cases in Tennessee. Of these, roughly 57 percent pay their court ordered support in a timely manner.
