Unlicensed

Unlicensed, uninsured and roaming our streets. That is the scenario that is currently being faced by our local law enforcement community. Arrests for unlicensed and uninsured motorists have been steadily on the increase in the last few years and show no signs of abating anytime soon. Of course, a by-product of those arrests is the overcrowding of our court systems.

It seems that a day does not go by in our fair city in which an arrest is not made for this offense. I'm not going to blame any specific demographic for this particular problem; in my mind the people who are driving without a valid license, whatever nationality they may be, are putting all of us at risk.

In most cases these people are generally caught by routine traffic stops or for some other minor violations, but I pose this question to all of you: what happens when these people are discovered because of a wreck or, God forbid, a fatal accident? Where does the responsibility lie at that point? What happens to the victims or their families when that scenario occurs?

For the most part the people of our city play inside the rules and the law. They have valid licenses and insurance, which is a responsibility that comes with the privilege of driving. That is right, driving is a privilege, not a right. In order to have that privilege you must comply with several criteria, age, eyesight, a written test and a road test. You must also provide proof of residency by producing a birth certificate, visa or government issued alien identification. Those who do not, or can not, are playing with all of our lives when they choose to get behind the wheel of a vehicle. It belittles what all the rest of the law abiding citizens of the community have gone through to exercise their privilege.

It seems to me that most of these individuals feel that it is no big thing to get caught under these circumstances because I see repeat offenders time and time again. Kudos to the local law enforcement community to continue to be vigilant when it comes to these drivers. But even then, it would seem to me that it would be frustrating to put the same people in jail over and over for the same thing while the wheels of the legal system turn in their slow tracks.

One final question, what right do these offenders have to jeopardize my life, my safety or the safety of my family because they apparently feel that the laws of this city, state and country do not apply to them?

ed's note: This problem has yet to see an end and law enforcement can only do what the law says and that is simply to make an arrest. It will take legislation being passed to somehow combat this growing problem across the state. The main problem with repeat offenders is there is no 2nd or 3rd or 4th offenses for driving without a license like there is for suspended or revoked license. Another problem is that the main core of these drivers are here illegally and cannot obtain a license due to the fact they have no social security number. We would like to know what you think about this issue and how it should be resolved. Let us know, address on page 2.

cording to the report, Corporal Chad Estes, LCSD responded to a motor vehicle accident on Old Hwy 95 with no injury. There were two vehicles involved and Zavala was driving one of them. He was found to have no license and no insurance. Corporal Chad Estes, LCSD made the arrest.

Felipe Menchaca Garcia, of Industrial Park Blvd, Lenoir City was charged with no driver license. According to the report, Sgt. Eddie Range, LCPD stopped Garcia and found him to be unlicensed. Sgt. Eddie Range, LCPD made the arrest.

Roderico Velasquez-Cano, 28, of W. 1st Avenue, Lenoir City was charged with driving without a license. According to the report, Officer Jason Butler, LCPD observed a vehicle on Kingston St and the driver and passenger was not wearing a seatbelt and stopped it. Cano was found to have no license. Vaccine nized to get a flu vaccination and have it protect them this winter," said Tim F. Jones, MD, State Epidemiologist. "We urge anyone who has not yet received a flu vaccination to get one."

Most people who get the flu recover fully within one to two weeks. However, some people develop serious, life-threatening complications such as pneumonia. Each year about 114,000 people in the United States are hospitalized and about 36,000 people die because of the flu.

A flu immunization protects not only the person vaccinated, but his or her family, friends and coworkers as well. Protecting yourself from the flu also helps protect those who may not be able to get a vaccine, such as young infants or people with certain medical conditions. It is especially important for people at high risk for contracting the flu, or anyone who comes into contact with a high-risk person, to get vaccinated. Those considered at high risk include:

- Pregnant women*
- Persons more than 50 years of age*
- All children age 6 months to 5 years of age*
- Anyone with a chronic medical condition such as diabetes or heart disease*
- Residents of long-term care facilities and nursing homes*
- Anyone living with or caring for young infants or anyone in the above mentioned groups, especially healthcare*

providers

It is also important to practice good hygiene and proper respiratory etiquette during flu season to protect yourself from the virus, and to help prevent spreading illness if you are sick. Common sense precautions include frequent hand washing with warm soapy water, keeping hands away from your face, and covering coughs and sneezes with a sleeve or tissue. These precautions can also help prevent the spread of other illnesses including the common cold.

"People should also stay home if at all possible when they are sick so they don't spread illness to coworkers or social contacts," said Kelly Moore, MD, MPH, medical director of the State Immunization Program. "Flu is highly contagious. Staying home can help reduce cases of flu and will help the person recover more quickly."

Flu vaccines are 70 to 90 percent effective in preventing flu among healthy adults. Flu vaccine protection takes about two weeks to become effective. The vaccine is available in two forms, a shot and a nasal spray.

For more information on the flu vaccine, visit the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Web site at www.cdc.gov/flu. To inquire about vaccine availability, contact your health care provider or your county health department. A complete list of county health department locations is available online at <http://health.state.tn.us/localdepartments.htm>.
