We all gathered around him and Toad asked him what he was doing. He slurred out a reply that he was getting the wrinkles out; this was when Molly, Coonfoot's sweetheart, saw the commotion in the parking lot and called the police. She did not realize her poor sweet Coonfoot was at the center of all this commotion.

around in a driveway. As the vehicle turned around the officer observed Amy Franklin driving the vehicle. The officer knows her license is revoked for DUI. The officer stopped Franklin and while he was talking to her at the drivers window he could smell the odor of burnt marijuana emitting from the vehicle. Franklin produced an ID card and a check showed her license to be revoked. Sgt. Hall asked Franklin to step out of the vehicle and she refused. Sgt. Hall advised her she was under arrest for driving on revoked.

Sgt Hall opened the door and Franklin reached for the gear shift and the officer attempted to remove her from the vehicle. Franklin put the vehicle in drive and sped off while Sgt. Hall was still half in the vehicle. The officer pursued Franklin down Peterson Road and onto Morganton Road and the officer passed her and blocked the road in front of her. The officer ordered Franklin out of the vehicle several times and she refused. The officer attempted to shut the vehicle off by reaching in the window. Franklin rolled up with window on Sgt. Hall's arm and put the vehicle in reverse and started to move backward with the officer's arm pinned in the window. At that time the officer was in fear of being dragged down the road and used his other hand to bust out the window. Franklin stopped and the officer removed her from the vehicle.

While searching the vehicle the officer found a metal box containing a substance believed to be marijuana along with a razor blade and a cut straw with a powder residue used to snort drugs. Also found was a pill bottle that the name had been removed for Hydrocodone. Found loose in the passenger compartment was 2 pills believed to be Hydrocodone. Found in Franklin's purse was a pill crusher and another cut straw. Due to the odor of burnt marijuana and Franklin's behavior a request was made for a toxicology test and Franklin refused any and all tests.

I believe every law officer in the county showed up. We still don't know if it was the commotion call, or the fact that the Salt and Battery Restaurant was the reason half of the force had to join weight watchers last year.

See, that place has some of the best southern cooked food in the state;

why if you was to put some of Molly's chicken & dumplings on the top of your head, your tounge would beat your brains out trying to get to them.

Now ol' Coonfoot sort of has this mean streak in him when he drinks and I noticed Toad whisper something in Coonfoot's ear and then Toad made for the restaurant like there was no tomorrow. We heard a loud groan and Coonfoot was on his not-so-steady feet. It was like Moses parting the Red Sea. Everyone backed up...

Conclusion next Monday. -Gus

90mph in a 50mph zone. The officer followed the vehicle onto Coyatee Drive and the vehicle did turn around several times almost striking the officers patrol car several times with him in it.

A perimeter was established and a female identified as Melissa Orrick, walked up to the officers on scene to surrender and advised a black male had been driving the vehicle and had about killed her in it. He had parked the vehicle behind a house and ran on foot. A search of the area revealed a vehicle parked in the woods behind a residence. A K-9 was deployed and deputies found Shane Matlock lying in the woods about 300 yards from the vehicle. A pat down of Shane Matlock revealed a metal pipe used to smoke illegal drugs. A check of his license showed them to be suspended with a prior driving on suspended charge.

Upon inventory of the vehicle burglary tools were discovered including a Ryobi 18v saw, battery, charger, and a 2 ton jack. A warrant check revealed Matlock is wanted on outstanding warrants for theft over $1000, and in Knox County he is wanted for failure to appear on attachment, failure to appear, and VOP.

approved for use in repelling mosquitoes and has performed comparably to more familiar repellents, such as DEET and picaridin products.

"The best way to prevent West Nile Virus infection is to prevent mosquito bites," said State Medical Entomologist Abelardo Moncayo, PhD.

There are currently four repellents that are recommended for use against mosquitoes and can be applied to the skin: DEET, picaridin, oil of lemon eucalyptus and IR3535. Any insect repellent product should be applied following the label instructions. Apply repellents only to exposed skin and/or clothing, never under clothing. DEET should not be used on infants younger than two months old, and DEET at 30 percent concentration is the maximum level recommended for children and infants over two months old. Oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children younger than three years of age. None of these products should be applied around the mouth or eyes at any age. Picaridin and IR3535 are as effective as low concentrations of DEET and there are no age restrictions recommended for these two products.

In addition, certain products containing permethrin are also recommended for use on clothing, shoes and camping gear, but not on skin. Permethrin is highly effective as an insecticide and a mosquito repellent.

Tennessee continues to be impacted by WNV with 11 human cases confirmed in 2007. While human cases in Tennessee last year dropped to half the number confirmed in 2006, health officials warn that citizens must still be vigilant in protecting themselves from the virus.

Mosquitoes become infected with WNV by feeding on infected birds and can transmit the virus to humans through their bites. Most human WNV infections are either asymptomatic or mild. About 20 percent of infections result in symptoms that may include fever, headache and body aches. However, these initially mild infections have occasionally led to more severe symptoms, including fatigue, memory problems, headaches, depression, tremors, muscle weakness and paralysis. Eighty percent of people who become infected with WNV have no noticeable symptoms. The virus cannot be spread from one person to another.

While anyone can become infected with WNV, certain populations are at higher risk of infection. High risk groups include the elderly, persons who abuse alcohol and those with chronic health conditions such as diabetes, hypertension, renal disease and cardiovascular disease.

Mosquito populations in Tennessee are at their peak May through October. Human cases of WNV usually occur beginning in July or August. There is no human vaccine for WNV; therefore, Tennesseans are urged to take preventive measures to avoid being bitten by infected mosquitoes.

Most mosquitoes likely to transmit WNV bite at dusk and dawn, so avoid being outdoors at these times. If you must go outside during these times use repellent or wear long sleeves, long pants and socks to protect yourself.

Eliminate standing water near your home, which can serve as a breeding ground for mosquitoes. Many containers, even those as small as a bottle cap, can hold enough water for mosquitoes to breed.

Keep windows and doors closed or cover them with screens to prevent mosquitoes from entering your home.

Use insect repellent containing either DEET, Picaridin, oil of lemon eucalyptus or IR3535. (Pure oil of lemon eucalyptus is not registered by the Environmental Protection Agency as an insect repellent, and is not covered by this recommendation.)

Officials with the TDOH State Laboratory will test mosquitoes and birds for WNV. Tennessee's state lab tests only American robins, blue jays and American crows for WNV. These three species are chosen because they are common in Tennessee, are easily recognized by the public, and have proven to be the most efficient species for WNV detection. Birds and mosquitoes are submitted for testing by county surveillance officials. WNV cannot spread directly from birds to people; however, dead birds should not be handled with bare hands. Anyone who finds a robin, crow or blue jay that has died recently is urged to contact their local health department.

Horses can also be infected with WNV. For more information on West Nile Virus, visit the TDOH Web site at <http://health.state.tn.us/ceds/WNV/wnvhome.asp>.
