Fishing

year round, un-regulated hunting habits. As most of you have figured out by now, he don't do anything normal and why would hunting be any different? Now Coonfoot is a bonafied rat-killing machine; he has been rat hunting now for more than 30 years and I can personally name you 72 different ways he has found to get rid of those little varmints.

This is how crazy he is about his rat hunting: he bought that new Gama High Powered Scoped Air Rifle; it's the souped-up version, it shoots 1675 feet per second. He also has built to accommodate the air rifle a camouflaged 10x10 covered rat tower that stands 20 foot tall. It looks out over the place where me and Toad stores our chum out on the back forty at Toad's farm.

We say that he is a true Tennessee Redneck, he hunts rats by day in that old shack and catfish by night in a boat that looks as unsafe as the rat tower. Some of us have concluded that this has to be some sort of childhood disorder.

One hundred and seventy six rats have met their demise at Toad's farm to date. The biggest one was a 17" sewer rat that would make the people at Boone & Crockett envious. He said the hard part is trying to find someone that knows how to do a good shoulder mount and, to me, that's the funny part, because I know he's being serious.

If you're ever out at Toad's farm and you see a great big old boy that's barefoot and caring an air rifle, that would be Coonfoot. Yell at him and ask him to take you rat hunting, ask him to hunt them Gus's favorite way: the run a hose from the old exhaust pipe into the rat hole method. You start the truck and grab your bat, it's show time. ToadsBaitShop.com -Gus
