Tips

eat nutritious foods is one thing — showing them is better. If you offer nutritious foods regularly — and if they see you eating them — your children likely will learn to like them.

2. Serve a variety of fruits and vegetables daily. In addition to bananas and apples, try something new like kiwi or papaya.

Add vegetables to stir fries or casseroles.

3. Schedule a snack time and stick to it. Space snacks at least two to three hours before a meal.

4. Involve kids in meal planning and preparation. Children often will eat foods they help plan and prepare. At the same time, your child can learn how to handle and prepare foods in a safe, healthful way.

5. Keep less-healthy foods on a higher shelf where they won't be noticed as much.

6. Eat as a family. If possible eat together at least once a day. If it's breakfast, set the table the night before for less effort in the morning.

7. Don't eat in front of the TV. Have your family eat around a table, not side by side at the counter.

8. Encourage your family to try new foods. Trying new foods expands your food knowledge, experience and skills. Kids will like some, but not all of these foods. That's OK.

9. Let kids stop eating when they say they're full. Encourage your child to eat slowly and pay attention to feeling full. By learning hunger and fullness cues, your child will learn to eat enough, but not overeat.

10. Enjoy your food. Avoid fussing, nagging, arguing or complaining at the table. A stress-free meal that is neither rushed nor prolonged promotes family bonding and helps everyone enjoy what they're eating.

Blazer

Deputy Freddie Gene Walker, LCSD, responded to the call and reported Letsinger stated workers for a local tree service were the only people in the area about a week before the vehicle became missing and friend told him he had seen a green Blazer on I-75 past Lovell Road on Monday.

The officer noted on his report he later was informed the vehicle had been located at Knox impound lot and called Letsinger to let him know it had been found.
