Is Your Child Drinking Enough Water?

On hot summer days, kids are naturally drawn to the water — playing in sprinklers, pools or at the beach. But are you sure they are drinking enough water in the summer?

Children perspire with active play, even in the water. Like adults, active children over 8 years old need eight or more cups of fluids during the day. Younger children need four to five cups.

To replenish fluids, bring along water if you plan to be out for longer than an hour or are going on an extended car trip. Kids may drink more water if it's offered to them in a "sports bottle" with their favorite team's or school logo on it.

Bringing water to the beach may sound odd, but for your kids, it's an important key to keeping your family hydrated.

The officer asked what he was doing and Buchanan stated he had a splinter in his underwear. Yes this is a real report. Yes this did happen in Loudon.

What Are the Ingredients?

Many people find the ingredient list on food labels difficult to interpret: What's in a product and how much? A simple rule makes ingredient lists easier to understand.

By regulation, any food made with more than one ingredient must carry an ingredient list on the label. Food manufacturers must list all ingredients in descending order by weight. Those ingredients in the largest amounts are listed first. For example, a can of vegetable soup that lists tomatoes first contains more tomatoes by weight than any other ingredient.

This list is especially useful for people with special food needs, such as those with a food allergy or intolerance, or those who wish to avoid other specific ingredients for religious or health reasons.

A registered dietitian can help answer your ingredients questions.

The screenings are open to all women age 40 or older, except for those with implants or current breast problems (such as lumps, pain, discharge, burning, or history of breast cancer). Call (865) 305-9069 to make an appointment or for more information about insurance, costs or services.

Breast cancer is the most commonly diagnosed cancer among women. The American Cancer Society recommends that women age 40 and older have a screening mammogram (X-ray of the breast) and a clinical breast exam every year. Detecting breast cancer at an early stage greatly improves chances of survival.
