Clarification offered on dog training listed in small game section of Hunting Guide

NASHVILLE --- The Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency is offering a clarification to the dog training guidelines listed under the Small Game Hunting section of the 2008 Hunting and Trapping Guide (hard copy).

Under the heading of Dog Training on page 15 of the "hard copy" (page 17 on the Web site hunting guide), the sentence should read as follows: Training of bird dogs, rabbit dogs, squirrel dogs and fox hounds is permitted year-round on private lands. "During daylight hours only" should not be in the sentence.

The 2008 Hunting and Trapping guide on the TWRA Web site reflects the change.

When Can Your Baby Have Fruit Juice?

The American Dietetic Association says fruit juice offers no nutritional benefits to children younger than six months.

After six months, pasteurized 100 percent fruit juice (not fruit drink) is an option, as long as your baby doesn't drink too much of it. Four to six ounces of juice a day are more than enough.

Offer juice in a small cup at mealtime—not from a bottle, covered cup or juice box, which can promote sipping juice throughout the day. Juice shouldn't be given in a bedtime bottle.

Is Fatty Fish Really Good For Me?

Fatty fish like albacore tuna, mackerel and salmon are rich in omega-3 fatty acids which research suggests may help lower the risk for blocked blood vessels, heart attacks and strokes.

Omega-3's are polyunsaturated fatty acids found mostly in seafood, especially higher-fat, cold water varieties like those mentioned above as well as sardines, Atlantic herring, swordfish and lake trout.

They are also found in the form of alpha-linolenic acid, which converts to omega-3's in flaxseed oil, soybean oil, canola oil and walnuts. omega-3's may help prevent arteries from hardening, lower levels of triglycerides and modestly reduce blood pressure levels.

Consult with a registered dietitian to find out more about omega-3's.
