Sartin charges bank collector with thefts

Police arrested a Loudon woman following an investigation into allegations she embezzled several thousand dollars while working at a Lenoir City bank.

According to the warrants, filed by Detective Jonathan Sartin, LCPD; on or about December 1, 2008 Sonja Ladale Clemmer was an employee of First National Bank in Lenoir City. While employed there Clemmer worked in the collection department. She would repo vehicles and then sell them. She sold a 2006 Dodge Durango in Harriman and collected $5500 for the vehicle and only deposited $4500.

Tennessee Launches Cervical Cancer Elimination Campaign

Nashville, - The Tennessee Comprehensive Cancer Control Coalition has launched a statewide campaign to eliminate cervical cancer in Tennessee. The Coalition urges all women to get a regular Pap test, the only screening test for cervical cancer, and encourages all young women to get the vaccine against the Human Papillomavirus that causes most cervical cancer. The effort begins this month as part of Tennessee's participation in the nationwide observance of Cervical Cancer Awareness Month.

"We want all Tennessee

women to know how important it is to get regular Pap tests to screen for cervical cancer, since early detection is crucial for saving lives of women who develop this disease," said Health Commissioner Susan R. Cooper, MSN, RN. "We also urge young women to take the vital preventive step of getting the HPV vaccine."

Cervical cancer is a silent killer that strikes without symptoms or pain until the disease is in the advanced stage. Regular Pap tests can help save lives by detecting the disease in earlier stages when it can most effectively be treated.

HPV can infect a woman at any time during her sexually active years. Women should begin getting annual Pap tests at age 21, or earlier if they are sexually active before that age. Most women will be advised to schedule a repeat Pap test every three years after they have three normal annual Pap tests.

"Getting the HPV vaccine, regular pap tests and following your health care provider's recommendations are the best ways to help eliminate cervical cancer in Tennessee," said Debbie Wujcik, RN, PhD, chairperson for the Coalition. "While most HPV infections resolve without medical treatment, any woman in whom the virus doesn't go away on its own or with a history of abnormal Pap tests should continue in follow-up care." Another important tool available to younger women is the vaccine against HPV, the first vaccine designed specifically to prevent cancer. This CDC-recommended vaccine became available in 2006, and is recommended for all girls and young women between the ages of 11 and 26 to prevent infection with the types of HPV that cause most cervical cancer. The Department of Health follows all vaccine recommendations from the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, a select group of immunization experts that provides guidance on control of vaccine-preventable diseases to the Secretary of the United States Department of Health and Human Services and the CDC.

"Like vaccines against polio, measles and other vaccines that have eliminated diseases that routinely killed and disabled people in the United States during the previous century, the HPV vaccine is a breakthrough in health because it can actually prevent cancer when given to girls and young women," said Kelly Moore, MD, MPH, medical director of the Tennessee Immunization Program. The Tennessee Department of Health provides Pap tests through the Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening Program to women who do not have access to routine health care. For more information, call the Tennessee Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening Program at 1-877-96-WOMEN (1-877-969-6636), or visit the TDOH Web site at <http://health.state.tn.us/BCC/index.htm>.

The HPV vaccine is available at Tennessee's county health departments. The federal Vaccines for Children program makes the HPV vaccine available free of charge to girls under 19 years of age who are uninsured, on TennCare or who have insurance that doesn't cover the vaccine. Other young women may purchase the vaccine at cost plus a small administration fee. Some 500 private doctors' offices in Tennessee also participate in the VFC program. Contact your health provider or your local county health department for more information. A list of county health departments can be found online at <http://health.state.tn.us/localdepartments.htm>.

Clemmer

On or about December 1, 2008 Clemmer sold a 2003 Cadillac to a business in Hariman and was paid $2500 and only deposited $1500.

While still employed with the collection department, on December 29, 2008 Clemmer extended a loan for a local man and told the man he would have to pay $1068 in cash to get the account right. The man paid the money to the bank but Clemmer never deposited it.

Also on December 29, 2008 Clemmer had a cashiers check made out to a local man for $600. The money was taken from his account and Clemmer kept the money and did not put it in the bank's account.

Sonja Ladale Clemmer, 43, of Wahuhu Lane, Loudon, was charged with theft over $1000 x3 and theft over $500. Detective Jonathan Sartin, LCPD made the arrest and filed the charges.

The name 'AP92 4PROTECTPLUS-V' on it and a charge for $19.95 on February 28th 2008. This name appeared nine times from February to October 2008. Another name appearing on the card was 'AP9*PMIDENTITY.com-V' this name appeared twice. Another name appearing on the card was 'ID MONITORING SVC-V' and it appeared seven times. All charges from each of the three companies was $19.95. The total charges appearing on her card from February 2008 to October of 2008 was $359.10

Ms. Hughes advised she never authorized these charges to be deducted from her account and she stated she does not know of any services provided by the company. She said she called the company and they agreed to take one charge off her account. She stated the charge was taken off and the service was canceled but they would not reimburse her for the other unauthorized charges.

Hughes advised the charges began to appear after she used Intelius.

The case is under investigation.

falling. She reportedly was very unsteady on her feet.

The woman was observed going to the beer cooler and getting a case of Bud Light Beer. When she got to the counter to pay for it the clerk refused to sell the beer due to her intoxicated state.

Corporal Estes approached the subject and identified her as Jammie Lynn Devaney, 30, Hines Valley Road.

Devaney allegedly had slurred speech and was slow at answering questions and could not focus. She reportedly had an odor of an alcoholic beverage about her person. Devaney also stated she had taken two Soma and she does not have a prescription for them.

Devaney was given several field sobriety tasks and did poorly she was charged with Public intoxication.
