According to records, Patrolman Brandon Gentry, LCPD responded to a possible drunk driver call on Highway 321. The vehicle in question was a white Ford F-350 and the officer noticed the driver was not wearing her seat belt.

After stopping the truck and making contact with Ms.

Galyon, Officer Gentry noted in his report her speech was slurred and drawn out, her actions were very slow and when he asked her for her paperwork, Galyon asked him where she might have put it.

Ms. Galyon performed poorly on all three sobriety tasks she was asked to perform. There were two small children in the vehicle, who were not restrained in booster seats.

The lawman read Ms. Galyon the implied consent form and she refused to take a chemical test.

Galyon was also cited for a drivers license violation, child restraint violation and for not wearing a seat belt.

Season

Resources Agency (TWRA) guidelines.

The daily bag limit for mourning doves is 15. This last segment can be very productive although it is very little used by hunters. Late harvested grain fields attract large flocks of northern doves as they migrate south. This can provide some excellent and challenging shooting for hunters who are willing to withstand the winter weather.

Hunters should remember that in addition to their licenses, the Migratory Bird Permit (Type 006 or 007) is required for hunting doves (for exceptions, see page 9 of the 2009 Tennessee Hunting and Trapping Guide). Shotguns must be plugged to hold no more than three shells when hunting migratory birds. For more information about Tennessee's hunting seasons, refer to the Tennessee Hunting and Trapping Guide available at all license agents or on the TWRA Web site.

The officer asked Mr. Shrader to exit the vehicle and he was reportedly unsteady and forgot to shut his door. Mr. Shrader performed poorly on field sobriety tasks.

Shrader was read implied consent and consented to a breath test at the jail where he registered a .09%.

means many people will begin to heat their homes with fireplaces, woodstoves and space heaters," said Newman. "Cold weather months typically have a higher number of accidental fire injuries and deaths, due to the use of these alternative heat sources."

Following a few safety tips can greatly reduce the risk of fires:

- * Make it a "house rule" to test your home's smoke alarms, before using a space heater or fireplace. All smoke alarms should additionally be tested once a month.

- * Space heaters need space. Never put a space heater within three feet of anything combustible – including furniture, bedding or aerosol cans. Make sure your space heater bears the mark of an independent testing lab such as UL or FM. Be sure to buy models with automatic shutoff features. Never use extension cords with space heaters.

- * Before you use your fireplace, make sure the chimney has been professionally cleaned to remove the buildup of combustible materials that accumulate inside the flue.

- * Be sure any kerosene-fueled heating device is installed with proper ventilation. A portable kerosene heater must be filled only in a well-ventilated area, free of flame and other heat sources, and only when the device has cooled completely. Use only the type of kerosene specified by the manufacturer, and never use gasoline in place of kerosene.

- * Never leave a fire, space heater or flame unattended.

- * Keep a cut Christmas tree's moisture content more than 100 percent by keeping it in water. This significantly reduces the chance that its needles will dry out and pose a fire hazard. National Fire Protection Association studies have found that, on average, one of every nine Christmas tree fires causes a fatality, compared with an average of one death per 75 non-confined home fires. Fires involving Christmas trees cause 94 percent of those related fatalities when they spread beyond the rooms where the fires begin.
