Tennessee Is First State to Launch HunterExam.com's Interactive Hunter Education Course

Nashville, - Tennessee is the first state to adopt the HunterExam.com 'required study' course. The new HunterExam online course allows students to complete coursework online before attending required hands-on classroom training to obtain their Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency (TWRA) hunter education certificate.

Since all persons born on or after Jan. 1, 1969 must satisfactorily complete a hunter education course before obtaining a Tennessee hunting license, HunterExam.com projects an engaging and effective way of preparing future hunters.

"We commend TWRA for being the first state to implement the HunterExam required study' course process," said Kerry Moher, vice president of HunterExam.com. "A number of other state agencies plan to introduce HunterExam to their hunting public later this spring."

Randy Huskey, TWRA Hunter Education Administrator, emphasized the fact that instructor-led Field Days remain a crucial part of the HunterExam process. "The online course is a convenient method for students to complete the required course sections and chapter quizzes at home so more hands-on training can be conducted at the Field Day," said Huskey.

With an emphasis on safety, the HunterExam.com program focuses on reducing hunting accidents through coursework presented in a narrative fashion with more than 350 original illustrations, 30 interactive exercises followed by review questions and discussion points. Students also have access to HunterExam.com's industry exclusive toll-free customer service help line from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. (central), seven days a week, as well as its online live chat customer service feature.

The HunterExam.com Web site has a cost involved as the student will have to pay $24.95 to print out the field day voucher.

The field day voucher is a certificate that grants the student admission to a TWRA field day. The student must attend a field day in order to become certified.

Students may visit the HunterExam.com Web site at any time and view the site free of charge. If a student decides to take the HunterExam.com course, he or she must log in to the site and will be prompted to create a user name and password. At this time the HunterExam.com Web site begins tracking the student.

The student must spend the required amount of time on each page. The required amount of time is based upon how long it takes to read the text on the page. In addition to the text being printed on the page a narrator reads each page to the student.

The student completes each page in sequence and takes chapter exams that are based upon the chapter material and the Tennessee Hunter Education final exam. After completing all the chapters, the student is then prompted to proceed to the exam center of the HunterExam.com Web site. At this time the student will be required to pay the $24.95 in order to print out the field day voucher.

The student is then given more information on obtaining field day dates and locations in Tennessee. The student is also reminded that the field day voucher is not a hunter education graduate certificate. It is merely a voucher that allows the student to attend a TWRA field day.

In addition, HunterExam.com offers the only treestand safety course based on the latest guidelines developed by the Treestand Manufacturers Association. This new fully interactive, narrative course effectively engages students and is only 15 minutes long. The course is free to anyone with an Internet connection. Shaw ly Friday morning at around 1:08 a.m where he came upon several juveniles and a couple adults standing in a parking lot.

Upon approaching the group the officer reported he smelled alcohol on some of the individuals and determined four of the juveniles had been drinking. Two of the young people were female and both allegedly stated one of the girl's mother supplied the alcohol.

According to the young ladies, they were at a birthday party for Ms. Shaw's son. Her daughter and the other 16 year old reportedly were drinking alcohol.

Records indicate Kelly Shaw's son asked her if they could drink and according to the juveniles Ms. Shaw said they could drink the alcohol.

The two male juveniles stated they also were drinking at the party.

The officer concluded his report by noting Ms. Shaw did contribute to the delinquency of the minors by allowing them to consume alcohol while in her presence.

Police Beat

to a domestic assault call with an assault at a residence on Jackson Bend Road. The complainant stated the assailant, Wade Wilson came home intoxicated, threw a trash can at her and also hit her in the mouth.

According to the officer's report the woman did have a small red mark/cut on the inside of her upper lip. She also stated Wade hid her phone and locked her out of the residence and she went to the neighbors to call the police.

The alleged assailant would not open the door on the Officer's arrival. He was moving around in the residence and looking out the window at the officers.

Forced entry had to be made to make the arrest on probable cause for aggravated assault by domestic violence. Wilson was intoxicated, with many beer cans and garbage on the floor of the residence. Deputy Steve Helm, LCSO made the arrest.

Jewelry

Conkey, LCSO was dispatched to Bright Road in Philadelphia in reference to burglary to a vehicle.

The complainant, Leroy Brown stated he went out to his vehicle between 5:00 and 5:30 p.m. and noticed the drivers side door handle key hole had been messed with. Mr. Brown went through the vehicle to see if anything was missing.

Mr. Brown said he discovered one engagement ring and two wedding bands were gone. The word

'Keepsake' was imprinted on the inside of the wedding bands.

The total value of the loss was estimated at $1,200.
