National Cyber Security Awareness Month 2017

Protecting Yourself Online in an Interconnected World

As hacks, data breaches, and other cyber-enabled crime become increasingly commonplace, this year's National Cyber Security Awareness Month is an important reminder of the need to take steps to protect yourself and your family when using the Internet. Launched in 2004 by the Department of Homeland Security, the month-long campaign is designed to help individuals and organizations understand the risks of cyber threats and how to protect themselves. ## New Top Ten Fugitive Help Us Catch a Killer

A North Carolina teen charged with murdering his former girlfriend has been named to the FBI's Ten Most Wanted Fugitives list, and a reward of up to $100,000 is being offered for information leading to his capture. Alejandro Castillo—17 years old at the time of the killing—is wanted in connection with the 2016 murder of a 23-year-old woman, Truc Quan “Sandy” Ly Le, whom he had previously dated. The two became acquainted while working together in a Charlotte restaurant. A joint investigation by the FBI and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department (CMPD) revealed that Castillo owed the victim money—approximately $10,000. Kristina Jones, 49, Matlock Alley Philadelphia, was charged with Mfg/Del/Sale or Poss. of Meth in a Drug Free School Zone, and Poss. of Drug Para. Inv. Marty Stanley LCSO, was dispatched to Elm Street Philadelphia, on a complaint of drugs and drug para. lying next to a telephone pole. Inv. Jamie Ketner LCSO, and Stanley arrived on scene and spoke with the complainant. The complainant advised a female wearing a pinkish top and blue jean with dark hair place some object beside the pole, across the street from her house then ran away. Located by the pole were a syringe and 3 separate bags of a crystal substance that tested positive as methamphetamine. As Inv. Stanly walked toward the pole the complainant pointed out the female walking on Elm Street. Inv. Ketner made contact with the female identified as Kristina Jones. Jones admitted leaving the drugs by the pole. The drugs were located within 1000 feet of Philadelphia School.

$1,000. Text messages between Castillo and the victim showed they agreed to meet in Charlotte on August 9, 2016, so he could repay the loan.

U.S. Customs and Border Protection surveillance video of Alejandro Castillo (gray shirt and black hat) and his accomplice (black and white top, shorts) crossing the border from Nogales, Arizona into Mexico on August 16, 2016, just after 9:00 p.m. Castillo has been added to the FBI's Ten Most Wanted Fugitives List in connection with the murder of a woman in Charlotte, North Carolina, and a reward of up to $100,000 is available for information leading directly to his arrest.

When the victim arrived at the meeting place that evening, Castillo apparently had no intention of returning the money. Instead, according to CMPD Det. Brent Koeck, Castillo had the victim withdraw a large sum of money from an ATM. Investigators believe Castillo drove the woman to a remote, heavily wooded area outside Charlotte, where she was shot in the head and her body dumped in a ravine. Castillo and his new girlfriend then fled the state in the victim's car.

The families of the victim, Castillo, and his accomplice all filed missing persons reports with the police when their children did not return home, and it took a week before the victim's body was found and identified. The victim's vehicle was located after the murder by the FBI's Phoenix Division at a bus station in Arizona.

Castillo and his accomplice had driven to Arizona and then crossed the border in Nogales into Mexico. Two months after the homicide, the woman who was with Castillo turned herself in to Mexican authorities and is now back in North Carolina facing charges related to the homicide. Castillo remains at large, and investigators believe he may be in the cities of Pabellón de Arteaga or San Francisco de los Romo, in the Mexican state of Aguascalientes. He may have also traveled to the Mexican states of Guanajuato or Veracruz. He is a fluent Spanish speaker.

Marc Weingrad, special agent, FBI Charlotte

Castillo has been charged with murder in North Carolina, and in February 2017 he was charged federally with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

"This crime was horrific," said Special Agent Marc Weingrad of the FBI's Charlotte Division. "Sandy was an innocent woman who was shot in the head." Weingrad believes the significant reward in the case—tipsters can remain anonymous and still be eligible for the reward—will motivate someone to come forward.

"The FBI has a long reach, and no matter where he is, we will not rest until Castillo is captured and brought to justice," Weingrad added.

Castillo is considered armed and dangerous. If you have information regarding Castillo, contact your local FBI office or the nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate, or submit a tip online at <https://tips.fbi.gov>.

Practice good cyber hygiene at work. When you're at work, you're a target. From personal data to financial information to company secrets, company networks are a gold mine for hackers and fraudsters. One common scam that victimizes companies is Business e-mail compromise, in which a hacker will gain access to a company official's e-mail to defraud the company or access employees' private information. Additionally, ransomware, in which hackers will place malware in digital files that demands ransom, is a serious threat to companies and other large organizations. Learn more about cyber hygiene to protect yourself and your employer. Know the risks of the Internet of Things (IOT). Cyber security goes beyond your computer and phone. Many homes are now filled with Internet-connected devices, such as home security systems, connected baby monitors, smart appliances, and Internet-connected medical devices. All of these devices present opportunities for hackers to spy on you and get your personal information. Using strong passwords and purchasing IOT devices from companies with a good security track record are just a few of the things you can do to protect your family and home. Learn more about IOT devices.

Cyber savvy? Uncle Sam wants you. As the cyber threat continues to grow, the FBI is similarly ramping up its efforts to recruit cyber experts to work as special agents, intelligence analysts, computer scientists, see CDC cont. pg. 7

Learn how the FBI and partner agencies are protecting critical infrastructure. Terrorist groups and other adversaries view the U.S. critical infrastructure—ranging from the financial sector to hospitals to electricity grids—as high-value targets that would disrupt American life if attacked. The FBI plays a key role in thwarting these attacks by stopping plots against critical infrastructure and investigating cyber attacks. Protecting these targets is a team effort among federal, state, local, and private sector partners. Three of the key partnership organizations the FBI is a member of are InfraGard, the Domestic Security Alliance Council, and the National Cyber-Forensics and Training Alliance. These strategic relationships promote timely information sharing between the FBI and the private sector, which helps to keep critical infrastructure networks safe from hackers and terrorists.
