Lewis County Man Indicted for Stealing from Soil Conservation District

The Tennessee Comptroller's Office has released an investigation resulting in the indictment of Timmie Hinson, a board member for the Lewis County Soil Conservation District.

Investigators determined that Hinson stole at least $2,713 from the district by submitting inflated cost amounts and receiving excess reimbursement related to a district project conducted on his personal property. The Comptroller's Office began its in-

Friends of the Knox County Public Library's Membership Campaign Underway

Library Lovers Invited To Come Together for Common Cause

"If the Knox County Public Library (KCPL) is the 'giving tree' for our community, the Friends of the Knox County Public Library are the gardeners who nurture KCPL," says Friends President Rusha Sams.

Responding to the Friends' invitation to join an organization that supports the library will grow a unique and valuable resource in Knox County.

For over 40 years, the Friends have worked to foster a love of libraries, books, and reading in the Knox County area through:

Community outreach through book sales, book distribution to underserved populations, and author events.

Advocacy that informs and educates the community about the library's services and programs and about how it is funded.

Support of the Knox County Public Library and its staff through grants and mini-grants for programs such as Imagination Library, the Children's Festival of Reading, Summer Library Club, and book discussion groups for diverse audiences.

Says KCPL Director Myretta Black, "We value the support of the Friends of the Library and the impact that this support has on the success of the library and the programs that we offer."

To learn more about Friends or to join online, visit the organization's website at knoxfriends.org.

Meth

Steven Abercrombie, 48, Moats Sewell Road Philadelphia, was charged with Mfg/Del/Sale or Poss. Of Meth. Deputy Kevin Kirkland LCSO, was dispatched to Mialaquo Road in reference to a theft of a chain saw. The complainant stated a male had stolen a chain saw and fled in a gold vehicle and was parked in the Food Lion parking lot. Deputy did observe the gold vehicle in Food Lion parking lot loading groceries. Deputy stopped and talked with the individual later identified as Steven Abercrombie, who did give Deputy consent to search his vehicle. Upon search of his person deputy located a metal container in his pocket which contained a small amount of a white crystal substance believed to be meth, and 2 white pills believed to be Subutex. Abercrombie stated the meth was not his and when he seen Deputy he grabbed it out of the front seat and placed it in his pocket. Deputy ask why he grabbed it out of all the other items in the seat. Abercrombie stated he didn't know but assumed it had drugs in it. Abercrombie was cleared of the theft after reviewing video, but was placed under arrest for the drugs.

Haslam Announces Candice McQueen to Lead National Education Non-Profit

As new CEO of the National Institute for Excellence in Teaching, Dr. McQueen will continue career-long focus on supporting effective teaching and learning Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam today announced Education Commissioner Candice McQueen will leave state service in January to become the CEO of the National Institute for Excellence in Teaching (NIET), a non-profit organization that helps states, districts, and schools attract, develop, and retain high-quality educators.

Haslam appointed McQueen in January 2015, and while serving as commissioner, the state has experienced record high graduation rates of 89.1 percent and the best overall statewide ACT average and best overall ACT participation rate in the state's history at 20.2 and 97 percent respectively. McQueen introduced a new strategic plan and vision for schools called Tennessee Succeeds, which has focused on increasing postsecondary and career readiness for all of Tennessee's 1 million students. She has continued the state's trajectory as one of the fastest improving states in the country in K-12 education, while adding historic gains in science, as measured by the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

"Candice has worked relentlessly since day one for Tennessee's students and teachers, and under her leadership, Tennessee earned its first 'A' rating for the standards and the rigor of the state's assessment after receiving an 'F' rating a decade ago," Haslam said. "Candice has raised the bar for both teachers and students across the state, enabling them to rise to their greatest potential. I am grateful for her service and know that she will continue to make an impact on education in Tennessee and across the country."

McQueen's work has touched students in all grade levels. She launched Read to be Ready, a multi-faceted initiative that is focused on improving students' reading abilities in the early grades, which has already shown initial early successes. And a record number of high school students are now taking and earning credit for early college coursework.

"Serving as education commissioner has been the honor of a lifetime, and it has been especially significant to help lead Tennessee's schools in partnership with a governor who has been incredibly focused on improving education for all of our students," Commissioner McQueen said. "I am proud to see what our students and educators have accomplished in these last four years and know we have laid a strong foundation for continued success. Through my new role with NIET, I will continue to be an advocate for Tennessee's teachers and work to make sure every child is in a class led by an excellent teacher every day."

Commissioner McQueen's entire career has been focused on teacher effectiveness — first as an award-winning teacher; then as a faculty member, department chair, and dean of Lipscomb University's College of Education; and for the last four years as Tennessee's education commissioner.

In her new role as CEO of NIET, she will lead a national organization that works with schools, districts, states and universities to support teachers and school leaders, impacting more than 250,000 educators and 2.5 million students.

Investigation after the Tennessee Department of Agriculture reported concerns regarding this project.

The investigation revealed that in 2016 Hinson requested district assistance to stabilize a stream bank on his property. Hinson signed the standard application and agreement acknowledging the district would reimburse him no more than 75% of the cost of the project.

Prior to starting the project, Hinson made a deal with a contractor which would allow Hinson to recover his total project costs, in direct violation of the agreement's terms. Hinson submitted a false and inflated invoice for $14,469.40 to the district, and he was reimbursed $10,852 (75% of $14,469). Hinson paid the contractor $9,447.55 and kept $1,404 to cover the value of services and equipment he personally contributed to the project.

As a result of submitting this inflated invoice, Hinson received excess public funds totaling $2,713 to which he was not entitled.

The Good News
 The Rev. Dr. Julius McCarter
 Scripture: Mark 13:1-8

There are times when it feels like I am standing in the middle of a tornado and I have no idea what is really going on in my life. When I feel out of control and my life is running me ragged, I have to stop and question my relationship with God. I have to ask myself,

"When was the last time I have actually stopped and talked with God?" When I do this, I usually come to the realization that my life is out of control because I have been the center of my life and God has been pushed aside.

We human beings build structures to make ourselves feel secure, but real security only comes when we take the time to nourish our relationship with God. Reading scripture and taking time for daily devotions are precious means of giving thanks for all we have, but we must also converse with the Lord to nurture our relationship with God.

Prayer: Lord, nothing we build as human beings is ever permanent. Lord, help us to remember that you have always been with us and invite us daily to talk with you and nurture the relationship you crave to have with us, for we are all your children. Amen.
