Deputy intercepted the truck at the 76 mile marker where he observed the truck nearly run a black Lexus SUV off the road at mile marker 74, the Lexus backed off and refused to go around due to the erratic driving. Deputy initiated his lights along with sirens at mile marker 74 and the truck did not yield to the shoulder, in fact it continued on where he put his blinkers on for lane changes but still was unable to maintain his lane of travel. Deputy made the decision to try and get the drivers attention at mile marker 71 due to him being a danger to the public, he appeared to be nodding off. The truck came to a stop at mile marker 69 where Deputy came in contact with the driver James Hendon who consented to a search of his truck where Deputy located 1 1/2 pills of Adderall (M/A20 orange) in a small baggie along with 10 Hydrocodone in his prescription bottle that was filled yesterday with 60.

Mr. Hendon stated his wife had his other Hydrocodone's at his house, along with the Adderall being his sons. He attempted to do Field Sobriety where he performed poorly throughout the process and did 8.85 seconds for the Rhomberg along with a Lack of Convergence. Mr. Hendon was heading from North Carolina to Athens unloaded and stated he thought he was in Bradley County which would have been past his destination. He was taken into custody where he refused Implied Consent and transported to the Loudon County Jail without incident. The vehicle was picked up by the owner. This all did occur in Loudon County, Tennessee.

assault. The call was dispatched as a woman screaming that her boyfriend had hit her. Upon arrival, Officer came into contact with victim, at that address. The victim appeared to have visible bruising and red marks on her arms and chest. She also had a cut on her forehead. She stated that her boyfriend, Dylan Graves, had come into the shower with her. She stated that he got upset because the water was cold and started calling her names. When she asked him to stop, he threw a bag of candy at her, hitting her in the chest, and breaking the bag of candy. She stated that he then got her belt and started hitting her.

After making contact with Mr. Graves, he admitted to throwing a water bottle down the hall, and throwing the bag of candy. Mr. Graves also had visible evidence of a physical altercation, with a cut on his hand and a bump on his forehead. He stated that these were from victim attacking him. Mr. Graves was arrested at the scene for two warrants that had already been issued (Violation of Probation #16-CR-1095 and FTA-Domestic Assault #2017-CR-1652), along with a new charge of domestic assault. He was transported to the Loudon County Jail.

Get to know the great daring of Eudora Welty

Library to host three-part reading/discussion series of Eudora Welty's life and short fiction

Eudora Welty was a southern lady, soft-spoken, genteel, fond of flowers and gardening. She lived most of her adult life in the house where she grew up, and she was beloved by her neighbors and kin. By her own account, she came of a sheltered life. She said, "A sheltered life can be a daring life as well. For all serious daring starts from within." It was out of that daring that Eudora Welty became one of the great writers of the 20th century.

Knox County Public Library is pleased to present Daring Greatly: the life and short fiction of Eudora Welty. Led by Professor Edward Francisco, this three part weekly reading/discussion series runs February 13-27 from 6:30-8:00 pm at Lawson McGhee Library.

Schedule with stories to be discussed:

February 13, 6:30 pm "A Worn Path"

February 20, 6:30 pm "Why I Live at the P.O."

February 27, 6:30 pm "Where Is the Voice Coming From?"

Daring Greatly is part of Reading Close to Home, an ongoing series focusing on the lives and works of southern writers. Admission is free.

About Eudora Welty
Eudora Welty was born in 1909 in Oxford, Mississippi. She studied at the Mississippi State College for Women before transferring to the University of Wisconsin to complete her degree in English literature. After graduating, she studied advertising at Columbia University in New York. When the Great Depression hit, she returned to Mississippi where she worked as a photographer for the Works Progress Administration. Her familiarity with and appreciation for the daily lives of the people she photographed gained her admission into previously undocumented aspects of African American culture. Welty published her first short story in 1936 and went on to publish twelve collections of short stories and essays and six novels. She received the Pulitzer Prize in 1973.

One story demonstrates particularly Welty's uncanny understanding of the racist, violent culture in which she lived. "I don't write out of anger," she said. "There was one story that anger certainly lit the fuse of." That story, "Where Is the Voice Coming From?" was written minutes after hearing about the murder of civil rights leader, Medgar Evers and then Welty dictated it by telephone to editors at The New Yorker before Evers' murderer had even been identified and arrested. Her depiction of the murderer was so accurate that details had to be changed and publication postponed.

Ronnie Odell, 47, County Road Sweetwater, was charged with Man/Sell/Del/Resale SCH II, Poss. of Drug Para., DUI, Driving on Revoked/Suspended License, and Violation of implied Consent.

Officer witnessed a red Saturn traveling on Highway 11 near Bivens body shop. The vehicle crossed the center line of the road multiple times.

The vehicle initiated his turn signal at two different turn offs but then turned his turn signal off and continued traveling the vehicle then made a left turn into the Oreilys auto parts. Officer did not initiate his lights or block the vehicles alley to leave and began speaking with the driver identified as Mr. Ronnie Odell. Officer noticed Mr. Odell was very jittery. Officer then asked Mr. Odell if he had a license to which he produced a TN ID only. Upon check his license did return revoked. Officer then asked Mr. Odell for consent to search the vehicle to which at this time he did give verbal consent. K9 Corporal Hutchens ran his dog in an open air sniff and the K9 did alert to the odor of an illegal narcotic. Upon search of the vehicle in a brown bag located in the front seat of the vehicle Sgt. J Bowen located a clear baggy containing a clear rock substance believed to be methamphetamine weighing about 1.5GM. In the backseat of the vehicle Officer J. Yates LPD located a digital scale. In Mr. Odells right jacket pocket Officer located multiple unused baggies. Mr. Odell then performed field sobriety and he did perform poorly. Both subjects were placed in custody. Mr. Odell was read the implied consent and refused to consent to a blood draw. All the above actions did occur in Loudon County TN.

Escaping One's Past

We all commit mistakes. There are myriad reasons why they happen. And when they do, all we want is to put our mistakes behind us. Sometimes we even attempt to erase them from memory.

Yet there will always be reminders of our faults. Each mistake brings with it social consequences. Like ripples in a pond, the people around us are affected as well. Every so often it's the people in our midst who will not allow us to forget. Especially when our mistakes involve having wronged others, those we have hurt find it difficult to pardon us.

It's not an easy thing to admit having done something wrong. We usually have to wrestle with our pride in order to do so. And it's the resulting guilt that makes it extremely taxing. Sometimes all we want is to forget our transgressions. But merely forgetting them may result in their repetition. In order to move forward, we need to accept our mistakes, to learn from them and struggle to avoid them in the future.

Time and again, all we desire is to begin anew. But it's never that simple. When we fall, people will usually think less of us. And recovering from being judged by others is exceedingly difficult. To rise up from each fall takes strength and courage, for it is so much easier to just give up. In order to start over, all we want is to be forgiven. And in truth, it is far more difficult to forgive ourselves than to seek the forgiveness of others.

We all desire a new beginning in order to move beyond our failures. Hence, we too should find in ourselves the ability to pardon others when they commit mistakes. In this way-Business Management Articles, we may all be given the opportunity to escape the past.
