FBI Victim Specialists Support Victims

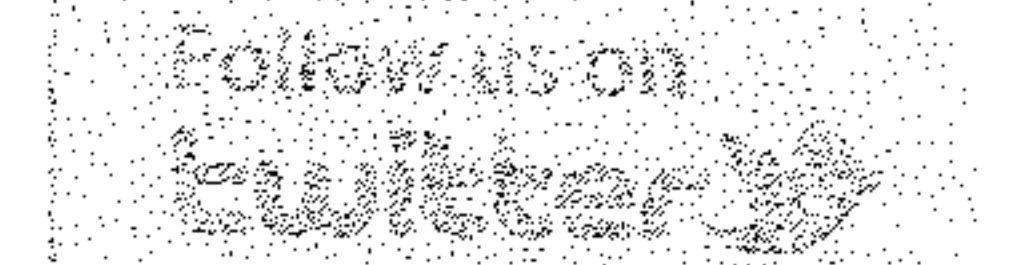

When a terrorist strikes a community, a pedophile targets children online, or a fraudster victimizes an unsuspecting person or business, the FBI works to investigate and bring the perpetrators to justice.

Yet the FBI's work doesn't stop there. One of the most important additional roles we play is assisting victims of federal crimes.

Whether providing emotional support to a child victim testifying in court or assisting with family travel logistics after a mass shooting, the FBI's victim assistance program, managed by our Victim Services Division, connects victims

Homicide

In addition, Matthew Alan Freeman, age 29 of Greenback (formerly of Philadelphia), was arrested by Loudon County Deputies today (April 12) for Maintaining a Dwelling for Drug Use. Freeman resided at the property which investigators have identified as the property where Brewster died.

Investigators have determined that Ingram "provided the financial means" for Brewster to obtain the oxymorphone (formerly sold under the trade name Opana) that was in his system at the time he died. A warrant for Ingram's arrest was issued on April 10th, 2018. Ingram is currently being held under other charges at the Monroe County Jail, and when he is released on those charges, Ingram will be transferred to the Loudon County Jail.

Sheriff Guider noted that investigations into this type of circumstances take time and patience.

Homicide from p. 2

Law enforcement must wait on toxicology and final autopsy results, and there is tremendous investigative work in trying to trace the source of the drugs back from the victim to the source(s).

Guider went on to say that he also wants the citizens of Loudon County to know "we are making a statement" in the battle against prescription drug abuse and are actively pursuing prosecution for the sources in overdose deaths.

of federal crimes with the services they need during some of the most difficult moments of their lives.

"While our special agents are investigating, the victim specialists across the country are partnering with them to support the victim or the victim's family and to attend to their needs," said Victim Services Division Assistant Director Kathryn Turman. "The victim specialists also ensure the lines of communication remain open with the investigative team."

An important aspect of the victim assistance mission is the forensic child interviewing program, in which experts who are highly trained in child development conduct court-admissible interviews with child, adolescent, and young adult victims of crime. More than 9,000 child interviews have been conducted since the program was created, many of them involving human trafficking, sexual exploitation, or violent crime.

As the country marks National Crime Victims' Rights Week this week, the FBI's victim specialists are working every day—as they do all year long—to ensure victims and their families get access to the resources they need.
