Bats
 Indiana Bat.
 Indiana bat numbers have been greatly impacted by Whitenose Syndrome in recent years. Winter bat counts indicate a loss of up to 80% of the population in areas of the state.
 For the past several springs, researchers have tracked Indiana Bats, migrating from their winter hibernaculum on the Cumberland Plateau to different states and to farms located in Wilson County, TN. The preferred summer habitat for the Indiana bat consists of dead trees with large, loose sections of bark. Maternity colonies of up to 70 Indiana bats have been documented in the voids created by the loose bark of these old dead trees. Often these trees, important for pup rearing, fall during the winters leaving the already stressed Indiana bat to expend energy searching for a new summer home.

“Bats go into hibernation with a limited amount of fat store to sustain them through the winter, so when they emerge in the spring they need to feed and find a summer roost”, says TWRA Region II Biodiversity Coordinator, Josh Campbell. “Dead snags that are the preferred habitat for the Indiana bat, those trees often fall during the winter months leaving the bats to have to search for a new home, expending energy that they can’t spare.”

Working with local landowners the TWRA crews installed nine untreated telephone poles outfitted with a specially designed wrap that will mimic loose bark. These artificial trees will last longer on the landscape and provide the Indiana bat a more sustained, accessible habitat to establish maternity colonies.

“For whatever reason Wilson County appears to be a pretty significant roosting area for the Indiana bat”, says Campbell, “and the goal is to provide as much sustainable habitat as possible for female Indiana bats to have and raise their young.”

TWRA biologists will be monitoring the area this coming spring and expect the bats will return to the area and utilize the new artificial bat habitat.

Re-ran 12-4-19

at the very least, a festive mood. The two most prevalent of these holiday scams are non-delivery and non-payment crimes.

In a non-delivery scam, a buyer pays for goods or services they find online, but those items are never received. Conversely, a non-payment scam involves goods or services being shipped, but the seller is never paid. In 2018 alone, the IC3 estimates that non-delivery and non-payment scams together affected more than 65,000 victims, causing almost $184 million in losses.

Similar scams to beware of this time of year are auction fraud, where a product is misrepresented on an auction site, and gift card fraud, when a seller asks you to pay with a pre-paid card.

The IC3 receives a large volume of complaints in the early months of the year, suggesting a correlation with the previous holiday season's shopping scams.

-Always be wary of deals that seem too good to be true.

Do your part to avoid becoming a victim. These simple tips from the IC3 can help you look out for scammers during the holiday season or any other time of year:

-Always get a tracking number for items purchased online so you can make sure they have been shipped and can follow the delivery process.

-Be wary of sellers who post an auction or advertisement as if they reside in the U.S., then respond to questions by stating they are out of the country on business, family emergency, or similar reasons.

-Avoid sellers who post an auction or advertisement under one name but ask that payment be sent to someone else.

-Consider canceling your purchase if a seller requests funds be wired directly to them via a money transfer company, pre-paid card, or bank-to-bank wire transfer. Money sent in these ways is virtually impossible to recover, with no recourse for the victim. Always remember that anyone who asks you to use one of these forms of payment might be a scammer. A credit card is generally the safest way to pay for an online purchase.

-Avoid sellers who act as authorized dealers or factory representatives of popular items in countries where there would be no such dealers.

-Verify the legitimacy of a buyer or seller before moving forward with a purchase. If you're using an online marketplace or auction website, check their feedback rating. Be wary of buyers and sellers with mostly unfavorable feedback ratings or no ratings at all.

-Avoid buyers who request their purchase be shipped using a certain method to avoid customs or taxes inside another country.

-Be suspect of any credit card purchases where the address of the cardholder does not match the shipping address. Always receive the cardholder's authorization before shipping any products.

-Always be wary of deals that seem too good to be true. If you do become the victim of a holiday scam, contact your bank immediately. You should also inform your local law enforcement agency, and file a complaint with the IC3 at ic3.gov.
