2008 and then with a cleared defense contractor until 2010, is charged alongside four Iranians who allegedly used information provided by Witt in a cyber campaign to target and compromise other U.S. security personnel.

The charges came as a result of years of investigative work by the FBI's Washington Field Office with assistance from the Air Force Office of Special Investigations. "This investigation exemplifies the tireless work the agents and analysts of the FBI do each and every day to bring a complex case like this to fruition," said Nancy McNamara, assistant director in charge of the FBI's Washington Field Office.

"[Witt] is alleged to have revealed to the Iranian government the existence of a highly classified intelligence collection program and the true identify of a U.S. intelligence officer, thereby putting the life of that individual at risk," said Assistant Attorney General John Demers of the Department of Justice's National Security Division.

The Texas-born Witt was recruited by Iran during conferences sponsored by the Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps

(IRGC) and defected in 2013, according to U.S. officials. Although she was no longer in active government service, Witt used the contacts and knowledge gained in her positions of trust to share sensitive information with Iran and provide personal and professional details that allowed Iranian hackers to target other U.S. intelligence professional through spear-phishing and malware attacks.

The indictment also charges Mojtaba Mosoumpour, Behzad Mesri, Hossein Parvar, and Mohammad Paryar with conspiring to commit computer intrusions targeting current and former U.S. government agents. The four IRGC-affiliated actors allegedly used information provided by Witt to send messages through email and social media accounts that contained links and attachments that would deploy malware and establish covert access to the targeted individuals' computers and networks.

"Once a holder of a Top Secret security clearance, Monica Witt actively sought opportunities to undermine the United States and support the government of Iran—a country which poses a serious threat to our national security."

Jay Tabb, executive assistant director, FBI National Security Branch

Witt and the four charged cyber conspirators are believed to still be in Iran, but arrest warrants have been issued should they travel out of that country. The U.S. Department of Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control also announced sanctions today against several Iranian entities that played a role in the alleged espionage.

"Today should serve as a warning to those who seek out our country's current and former national security personnel for the sensitive information they have—and to those individuals themselves," stressed Tabb. "The FBI takes the oath we swear seriously and will pursue those who do not."

about with words of woe! How do you score?

I'm thankful for these good things in my life. Yet, amid my thanksgiving, I hear Jesus' words as a warning about what my true treasure is. Wealth, a full stomach, laughter, and reputation are not the to be end-goal of those who possess them. Woe to us indeed if we hoard our wealth, food, and laughter. I wonder what new possibilities our wealth, our filled tables, and our shared laughter might bring, should they be dedicated to God's mission. How will we ever know if we keep them to ourselves?

Prayer: Benevolent God, you so freely gave your own Son that we might be saved by your love. Help us see where we might be instruments in your mission for abundant life for all people. Amen.
