The BPA-free TSI allegedly stolen by these individuals belonged to multiple owners and cost an estimated total of $119,600,000 to develop. Until recently, bisphenol-A (BPA) was used to coat the inside of cans and other food and beverage containers to help minimize flavor loss and prevent the container from corroding or reacting with the food or beverage contained therein. indictment on file with the U.S. District Court. The indictment alleges that You, Xiangchen, and a third co-conspirator formulated a plan in which You would exploit her employment with the two American employers to steal TSI and provide the information for the economic benefit of persons other than the TSI owners, including a Chinese company that would manufacture and profit from products developed using the stolen TSI.

“Our office is committed to working closely with our federal, state and local partners to identify and prosecute those who engage in illegal and deceptive practices to steal trade secret and protected information from companies who spend millions of dollars to develop it. Not only can theft of this information be potentially devastating to our American companies, it could also pose a threat to our overall national and economic security,” said J. Douglas Overbey, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

“The conduct alleged in today’s indictment exemplifies the rob, replicate and replace approach to technological development,” said Assistant Attorney General Demers. “Xiaorong You is accused of an egregious, premeditated theft and transfer of trade secrets worth more than $100 million for the purpose of setting up a Chinese company that would compete with the American companies from which the trade secrets were stolen. Unfortunately, China continues to use its national programs, like the ‘Thousand Talents,’ to solicit and reward the theft of our nation’s trade secrets and intellectual property, but the Justice Department will continue to prioritize investigations like these, to ensure that China understands that this criminal conduct is not an acceptable business or economic development practice.”

“The facts laid out in this indictment show the conspirators engaged in blatant criminal activity,” said Executive Assistant Director Tabb. “They didn’t stop at going after technical secrets belonging to just one company. They allegedly targeted multiple companies and made off with trade secrets at an estimated value of almost 120 million dollars. As this case demonstrates, the FBI is determined to do everything possible to bring to justice those who try to steal secrets belonging to American companies.”

Assistant U.S. Attorney TJ Harker and National Security

Division Trial Attorney Matthew Walczewski will prosecute the case for the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Eastern District of Tennessee. The investigation was conducted by the FBI.

The Good News
The Rev. Dr. Julius McCarter

Scripture: Psalm 37:1-11, 39-40

We may read today's psalm verses at a macro level--cataloguing the thugs who destroy a neighborhood or city, a country, or even our planet, God's handiwork. We may also focus on the micro level--detailing harm to us or our loved ones.

No matter how vast the damage, though, the psalmist counsels that we not seek to chasten the wicked or even wish punishment upon them. We should not plot revenge against evildoers. Rather, we are to trust in the Lord, take delight in the Lord, commit our ways to the Lord.

The psalmist's exhortation is consistent with the whole of Scripture. God's work in Christ is to reconcile all creation to Godself; therefore, we do not follow our base instincts, our malformed sense of justice. When sin and evil seem to have the upper hand, we bask in the light of God's vindication. We take refuge in God's righteousness. We practice God's mercy.

Prayer: O Lord Jesus, make us instruments of your peace. Where there is injury, may we plant pardon. Amen.

federal court on February 12, 2019, and a detention hearing was set for 1:30 p.m. on February 14, 2019. This case has not yet been set for trial.

If convicted of bank robbery, Baird faces up to 20 years in prison, up to three years of supervised release, a fine of up to $250,000, any applicable forfeiture, and a $100 special assessment.

The investigation and seizure of evidence was conducted by the Knoxville Division of the FBI Safe Streets Task Force, which is comprised of law enforcement officers from the Knoxville Police Department and Knox County Sheriff's Office, as well as agents from the FBI. The Sevier County Sheriff's office also assisted with the investigation and capture of the suspect. Assistant U.S. Attorney Brent N. Jones will represent the United States in court proceedings.
