Tennessee's Education Transformation Tennessee Recognized for Rigorous Proficiency Standards and Ranks Top in Country for Improvement of Standards

A May 2018 report from Education Next gave Tennessee an "A" for the state's academic standards, noting that the TNReady assessment is rigorous and provides feedback similar to the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP). The report also noted that Tennessee, which received an "F" for its standards in 2009, was the state with the greatest improvement in closing the "honesty gap" between state assessments and national benchmarks. Another 2018 report from Achieve notes that Tennessee was among the top seven states in eliminating the honesty gap and the gap was narrowed in every content area and grade in Tennessee.

Tennessee first committed to raising its education standards in 2007 after receiving an "F" from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce for low academic expectations and for truth in advertising on K-12 education. Under current Tennessee Governor Bill Haslam, Tennessee implemented new academic stan-

DUI

Andrew Gatto, 23, Wickersham Drive Knoxville, was charged with DUI, Poss. Of Drug Para, and Violation of Implied Consent.

Deputy Spradlin LCSO, received a call of a possible intoxicated driver south bound on Interstate 75 at the 83 mile marker. The caller stated that the vehicle pulled of on the side of the road and had smoke coming out of the vehicle. Deputy arrived on scene with the vehicle and made contact with the driver Mr. Andrew Gatto (offender). Deputy observed the offender to have blood shot watery eyes, slurred speech, and was very unsteady on his feet, and Deputy could smell the odor of a alcoholic beverage on his breath. Deputy asked the offender if he had been drinking and he stated that he had two beers before work at around nine o'clock. Deputy asked the offender if he could search his person and he consented to a search. Deputy located a glass pipe commonly used for smoking marijuana in the offender's left front pocket. Deputy asked the offender if he would be willing to do standardized field sobriety tests and he did. The offender performed standardized field sobriety tests poorly. Deputy observed the offenders vehicle to have front end damage and the airbags were deployed. Deputy observed the offender to have a busted lip, and some abrasions on his face. Loudon County Medics arrived on scene and cleared the offender. The offender was asked if he wanted to go to the hospital and he stated no. Deputy asked the offender if he wrecked his car and he stated that he was not going to answer any of my questions. The offender was placed under arrest for Driving Under the influence and Possession of drug paraphernalia.

Deputy read the offender Tennessee Implied Consent and requested a breath sample, and the offender refused to supply a sample of his breath for chemical testing.

The offender is also being charged with Violation Of Implied Consent.

All occurred in Loudon County TN

Education

dards and launched a new assessment known as TNReady. The studies released in 2018, which both praise Tennessee's new standards and assessment, are the first in which the state was evaluated on the new TNReady assessment. (Click here for more information from the Tennessee Department of Education.)

In December 2017, Stanford University released a map of student growth in public school districts across the country. One state stood out on the map for its increases in educational achievement:

Tennessee.

Only a decade ago, Tennessee stood near the bottom of most education rankings. Governor Bill Haslam and other state leaders have been determined to create a better education environment for students. In the last decade, Tennessee has aggressively pursued education reform to increase educational opportunity for all citizens and create long-term benefits for the state. U.S. News and World Report noted, "Tennessee has remained focused on education as a way to drive improvements in other parts of the state, including health care and employment."

The state's relentless focus on education means increasing student achievement at the K-12 level and ensuring that every student is prepared and able to attend college. Through the Tennessee Promise scholarship program, all high school graduates in Tennessee can attend a community or technical college tuition-free. Tennessee Promise is part of Governor Haslam's Drive to 55, a challenge to get 55 percent of Tennesseans to hold a degree or credential by the year 2025 to meet future workforce demands.

The increasing NAEP rankings show that Tennessee is well on the path to meeting our achievement goals. The state set a goal in the 2015 strategic plan for education, Tennessee Succeeds, to move Tennessee into the top half of states in NAEP rankings. The fourth grade math scores are already meeting that goal and the state's latest NAEP results in science received national attention for being at the top in growth and achievement gap, moving to 19th and 21st, respectively, in fourth and eighth grade science.

Tennessee has also had other historic success marked this year with the highest graduation rate in the state's history at 89.1 percent and the highest ACT average ever at 20.1. And, to ensure readiness for postsecondary, we have seen the largest jump in early postsecondary course taking and credit attainment, and the number of students requiring learning support when entering community college has decreased.

Investing in education, from pre-K to postsecondary, is paying off for Tennessee. Student achievement is increasing and educational attainment rates are rising; our state has momentum and is on a trajectory to meet the economic demands of the future.

Burglary

Christopher Dailey, 36, Vale Street Loudon, was charged with Burglary, Theft of Property, and Simple Possession. During the night hours someone entered into a building located on Main Street in Loudon for purpose of committing theft. Taken from the building were several antique knives, and an antique decorative box valued at approx.. $350.00, as well as other antiques. Entry was made by prying a hasp off s lock and entering the back door. The building is used for storage. The victim gave no one permission to enter the building or take any property. There was a camera in the building due to previous thefts. The camera snapped several pictures of the person responsible for the burglary. After an investigation the male was identified as Christopher Dailey. Dailey was located and arrested.

The Good News The Rev Dr Julius McCarter

Scripture: Isaiah 43:16-21

A quip traversing the internet recently says, "Don't look back; you're not going that way." God seems to say something similar to the Israelites in today's reading: "Do not remember the former things, or consider the things of old. I am about to do a new thing."

Why do we often gaze into life's rearview mirror, instead of out the windshield?

Why is it hard to stop dwelling on past events--good or bad--to free ourselves for the new gifts God has for us in the present?

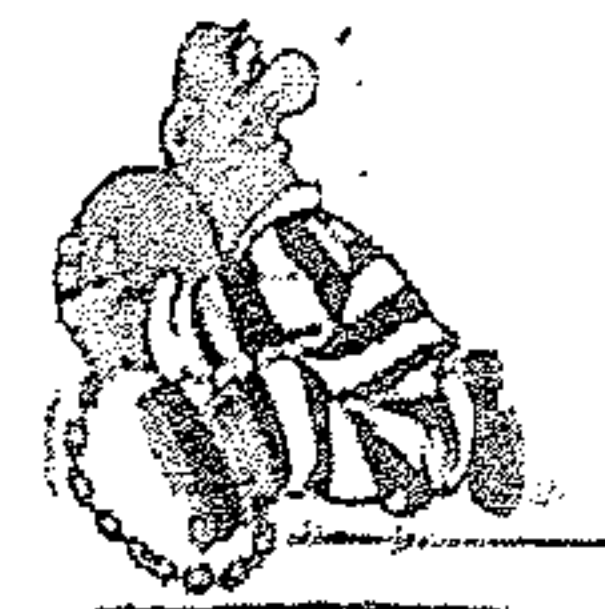

What's worse, despite the familiar adage, hindsight is not always 20/20.

Consider the recently liberated Hebrews pinning for the food of Egypt, apparently forgetting they had bought it with their slave labor. "I'm about to do a new thing," says the Lord. "Do you not perceive it?" Not if we're looking backward instead of forward, we won't. Prayer: God, you have redeemed the sins and struggles of my past.

Help me let go of them in order to focus on the new things you are doing in my life. Amen.
