Ticks

University of Tennessee Institute of Agriculture (UTIA) today announced the detection of the invasive Asian longhorned tick in Tennessee.

The Asian longhorned tick has now spread to 11 states. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports that there is no evidence that the tick has transmitted pathogens to humans or animals in the U.S.

Two Asian longhorned ticks were recently found on a dog in Union County, and five were found on a cow in Roane County. In the U.S., the tick has been reported on 17 different mammal species.

"Tennessee has a relatively large amount and variety of ticks," Dr. R.T. Trout Fryxell, Associate Professor of Medical and Veterinary Entomology for UTIA, said. "It is important to be diligent and keep an eye out for all ticks because many varieties can transmit pathogens or cause painful bites.”

Tips to prevent tick bites in animals and livestock include:

-Coordinate with your veterinarian to determine appropriate pest prevention for pets and livestock.

-Check pets and livestock for ticks frequently.

-Remove any ticks by pulling from the attachment site of the tick bite with tweezers.

-Monitor your pets and livestock for any changes in health.

If your animals are bitten by a tick, Dr. Trout Fryxell suggests putting the tick in a ziplock bag, writing down the date and where the tick was most likely encountered, and storing it in a freezer. If any symptoms of a tick-borne disease begin to develop, you should bring the tick to your veterinarian.

the healing of the nations. This vision into another dimension of God’s realm highlights the great need of the realm in which we live today: the healing of the nations.

Here and now displaced persons need homes. Here and now diseases need a cure. Here and now weapons need to be turned into productive tools.

Here and now lonely people need friends. Here and now those in prison need visitors. Here and now we need each other as siblings in a beloved world community, all created in God’s image. Here and now all the nations--indeed all of us--need healing.

Prayer: Glorious God, in your gracious care you desire the healing of the nations. Keep that vision before us and make us instruments of your healing grace in all our relationships. Amen.

Hungry

a competitive proposal process.

No Kid Hungry's School Breakfast Leadership Institute brings together national, state, and local leaders to develop new and better ways to connect kids with school breakfast. Tennessee's state team is composed of stakeholders who can influence school breakfast practice and policy from the Tennessee Department of Education, first lady's office, Tennessee Organization of School Superintendents (TOSS), State Board of Education, and Knox County Schools.

"We are excited about this unique opportunity to bring our team together to identify the most effective ways to ensure Tennessee students have access to school breakfast," said Lori Paisley, executive director of healthy schools at the Tennessee Department of Education. "We believe that healthy students learn better, and a healthy breakfast sets our students up for success. The support we will receive will allow us to establish goals and to develop key strategies to strengthen school breakfast across the state."

One out of every five kids in Tennessee is growing up in a family that struggles with hunger; school breakfast only reaches 65 percent of students who may need it. School breakfast is an energy source for kids across the nation. Research shows that hunger has long-term ramifications on children, including lower test scores, weaker attendance rates, and a higher risk of hospitalizations and chronic diseases. No Kid Hungry and its partners focus on school breakfast as a critical way to end childhood hunger.

Accessing traditional cafeteria breakfast service can be challenging for many kids. Breakfast after the bell provides breakfast in a way that is more convenient and accessible to students, resulting in more kids starting the day ready to learn.

About No Kid Hungry

No child should go hungry in America. But one in six kids will face hunger this year. No Kid Hungry is ending childhood hunger through effective programs that provide kids with the food they need. This is a problem we know how to solve. No Kid Hungry is a campaign of Share Our Strength, an organization working to end hunger and poverty. Join us at NoKidHungry.org.
