Reports of Elder Financial Exploitation are Increasing in Tennessee Comptroller's Office evaluates the patchwork of state and local entities that protect elderly Tennesseans

The Tennessee Comptroller's Office has completed a review of elder financial exploitation in Tennessee. Elder financial exploitation is the wrongful or unauthorized use of the assets, funds, or property of elderly individuals. Those who exploit the elderly may include family members, businesses, acquaintances, and strangers. Over the last several years, the Tennessee General Assembly has strengthened state laws to protect the state's elderly population from financial exploitation, as well as abuse and neglect.

Elder financial exploitation appears to be increasing in Tennessee. The Adult Protective Services (APS) program in the Tennessee Department of Human Services operates the statewide hotline and reporting system for complaints about all types of elder abuse. APS also investigates reports of elder abuse.

Garrison Brackins, 19, Prince Street Sevierville, was charged with Man/Sell/Poss. of Controlled Substance, and Possession of a Firearm.

Larry Darby, 18, Roberts Road Sevierville, was charged with Man/Sell/Del/Resale Sch. VI. And Poss. Of a Firearm.

Deputy Jenkins 922 LCSO, got behind a Ford Escape on Oakland Rd. in the area of Bannon Rd. While behind the vehicle Deputy observed it cross the center line twice and saw white light emitting from the right taillight due to it being broken(traffic citation 18174). Deputy stopped the vehicle on Oakland Road near Blue Bird Ln. Deputy then made contact with Garrison Brackins, offender 1 and driver, Larry Darby, offender 2 and front seat passenger, and back seat passenger. Deputy Immediately smelled a strong odor of marijuana coming from the vehicle. Offender 1 explained that the car smelled like Marijuana because he had smoked some earlier. Offender 1 consented to a vehicle search were Deputy found 5.57 ounces of marijuana inside a black backpack in the front passenger side of the vehicle within reach of both offender 1 and 2. The marijuana was packaged in 5 different plastic bags. Deputy also located Glock 23 that offender 1 advised was his dads and a Ruger model 23 that offender 2 advised was his. After offender 1 was read and acknowledged his Miranda warning he advised me that the Marijuana was not his but the black backpack it was found in is his. Offender 1 advised that they put the marijuana in his bag because the bag is supposed to conceal the odor of marijuana. After offender 2 was read and acknowledged his Miranda warning he advised that the marijuana was his but the bag it was in belonged to offender 1. Offender 1 and 2 both advised that they had so much marijuana because their friend just had a birthday and they were in town to celebrate. After the front seat passenger was read and acknowledged her Miranda warning she advised that the marijuana belong to both offenders but the bag belonged to offender 1. Offender 1 and 2 were transported to the Loudon County Jail and the vehicle was turned over to the passenger with the permission of the registered owner.

Offender 1 is on probation out of Sevier county. This did happen in Loudon County Tn.

APS data confirms that, from 2015 to 2019, the number of reports it received for all elder abuse categories increased by 52 percent, while reports of financial exploitation increased by 87 percent.

One overarching concern, expressed by stakeholders across the state, is that state law limits the types of investigations of elder financial exploitation that APS, the agency most closely associated with issues concerning elder abuse, can undertake. APS can investigate these cases only when they involve a caregiver and the misuse of government funds.

Research by the Comptroller's Office of Research and Education Accountability (OREA) found that Tennessee's approach to protect elderly adults from financial exploitation is made up of a patchwork of state and local entities. APS officials told OREA that the agency receives a large number of reports of suspected elder financial exploitation that do not meet the criteria for investigation under the law, and that it refers these to law enforcement and district attorneys general, among other entities.

The effectiveness of Tennessee's patchwork approach, however, is unknown due to data limitations. Although efforts have ramped up in recent years to better coordinate the review of suspected cases of elder financial exploitation, there is no statewide system to track elder financial abuse cases in Tennessee. Without a statewide system, it is not possible to track the progress or resolution of cases when they are shared between state and local agencies.

The lack of a statewide data system also prevented OREA from fully estimating the prevalence and cost of elder financial abuse in Tennessee.

OREA's research found that APS does not have enough intake workers and district attorneys lack the specialized staff to tackle the complexities of some elder financial exploitation cases. Reports of abuse to APS have increased in recent years and intake workers are at full capacity during peak times. According to an APS official, intake workers at APS are not always able to follow up on each report.

District attorneys also indicate that staff with specialized knowledge of financial exploitation or accounting are necessary to prosecute a wider range of elder financial exploitation cases.

The Comptroller's Office has included a number of policy considerations for the General Assembly in its report.

McKnight will be supervised by the U.S. Probation Office for 15 years and will be required to register with the state sex offender registry in any state in which he lives, works, or attends school.

The investigation began after the parents of a minor female informed local a law enforcement agency that McKnight had contacted their daughter on social media and began sending messages of a sexual nature to her. During the undercover investigation, McKnight attempted to get the minor to send him sexually explicit depictions of her and to meet for sex. McKnight drove from Virginia to Tennessee for the purpose of having sex with the girl.

"This prosecution represents part of our efforts to work with law enforcement agencies to protect children from persons who try to groom children online for child pornography and other illicit purposes," said J. Douglas Overbey, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Tennessee. U.S. Attorney Overbey encourages parents to be vigilant concerning the online activities of their children. "These predators operate from the shadows of the internet, pretend to befriend young people, and then prey upon the minors' vulnerability to induce them to send sexual images and videos, unbeknownst to their parents."

The case was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with assistance from Claiborne County Sheriff's Office. Assistant U.S. Attorneys Matthew T. Morris and Jennifer Kolman represented the United States in Court.
