Regional Computer Forensics Laboratories Fighting violent crime and protecting national security one byte at a time

An RCFL examiner's workstation houses approximately $60,000 worth of the latest high-tech electronic equipment.

RCFL workstations are equipped to exploit many different types of electronic devices. With phones now holding half a terabyte—the equivalent to multiple movies or tens of thousands of photos—the forensic team is constantly faced with sifting through an overwhelming amount of information.

For most of us, it's a familiar frustration: getting locked out of your phone after forgetting a password or trying to fix a water-damaged device. For the Regional Computer Forensics Laboratory (RCFL) teams, the situation is more urgent. Every successfully accessed device—whether it's a phone found at the scene of a homicide investigation or a computer linked to crimes against children—is a potentially critical piece of an investigation puzzle.

RCFL

Each of the FBI's 17 labs focuses on extracting and analyzing digital evidence—pulled from devices like mobile phones and computers—in support of federal, state, and local investigations. Whether it's in support of a terrorism, violent crime, or child sexual abuse material case, RCFL examiners are capable of locating deleted, encrypted, or damaged files and data that may serve as evidence in a criminal or national security investigation.

The lab in Kansas City, Missouri, known as the Heart of America RCFL, serves as a critical resource for some of the region's most complex cases involving digital forensics. Detective Josh Clevenger of the Kansas City Missouri Police Department has been part of the Heart of America RCFL task force since 2010 and cites partnership and collaboration as a core of the program. Before joining, his expertise was in building computers, a skillset that sparked his interest in the digital-forensics world.

Today, much of Clevenger's work revolves around extracting data from mobile devices—some as powerful as computers—storing information like text messages, photos, and geolocation data.

But what happens when a phone is locked, damaged, or encrypted? Forensic experts like Clevenger are experts at cracking the code.

"Encryption is the hardest thing to get past," said Detective Jason Steinke, a 30-year veteran with the Kansas City Police and deputy director of the Heart of America RCFL. "We're always fighting to figure out the new way to get past a locked phone or an encrypted drive."

"Think of it like picking a lock," Clevenger explained. "The device manufacturers place blocks in between the data and us being able to get to it. So, we use a lot of different tools to get past those."

"These are good for the consumer," he continued. "There is personally identifiable information you wouldn't want anybody to know about like health data and bank data on your phone. It just makes our job harder in the beginning."

This tenacity has earned them a reputation not just within law enforcement but among criminal investigators nationwide. Together, RCFLs are tackling everything from large-scale financial fraud to the most disturbing cases of child exploitation.

"We don't take no for an answer," said Steinke. If someone says a device can't be accessed, he and his team won't just give up. They will figure out a way.

Picking the lock is just part one. According to Clevenger, the second part is the most important. He and his team not only have to extract the data, but they have to make it readable by humans and understandable to investigators and a potential jury.

The lab played a critical role in bringing closure to the 2017 disappearance of 20-year-old Tomi Anderson, whose case had gone cold. Speculation about Anderson's death drove headlines across the country.

Two months after her disappearance, Anderson's body was found inside her vehicle, 20 feet underwater in the Missouri River. The Heart of America RCFL recovered data from Anderson's phone that had been in the river for months. The phone was nearly destroyed—bent, corroded, and encrusted with mud.

"I spent a week cleaning it, and finally it started up," said Steinke.

He was able to exploit the data, and it answered a lot of questions, corroborating everyone's stories and showing that there was no foul play.

The lab's workload has shifted in recent years. While cases of child sexual abuse material still account for a significant portion of the team's caseload, homicides and assaults have become a growing focus. With digital evidence becoming integral to nearly every violent crime investigation, the demand for forensics experts has never been higher.

With phones now holding half a terabyte—the equivalent to multiple movies or tens of thousands of photos—the forensic team is constantly faced with sifting through an overwhelming amount of information.

"You're trying to find a needle in a haystack," said Steinke. "There are times we're looking for something specific, and it could be hidden within the system files on the computer. It makes it difficult."

The team's work extends beyond the physical laboratory. A mobile forensics lab—a van outfitted with all the tools and equipment needed—allows the team to deploy on-site to investigations. The mobile lab gives investigators the ability to access networks and devices and get to work immediately.

"In cases of violent crime or kidnapping, you don't have time to wait," said Clevenger. "When lives are at stake, minutes and seconds count, and it's important to be able to get the data when we need to get it."

The mobile lab can be on-site, pulling data right away and passing it along to the investigators. The team's expertise and technology also mean that they're able to act discreetly, which is crucial for sensitive investigations.

"Through the work of the RCFL, we've been able to solve hundreds of local, state, and federal crimes including homicides, terrorism cases, violent crimes, and hold accountable child predators," said Stephen A. Cyrus, FBI special agent in charge of the Kansas City Field Office in Missouri. "Thanks to the work of FBI personnel and task force officers from all our partner agencies, the RCFL has truly ensured safer communities throughout Kansas and Missouri."

As a team, the Heart of America RCFL has assisted in solving some of the region's most high-profile and sensitive cases. But what truly makes this group of experts stand out is their unity and unwavering dedication.

As law enforcement continues to face new threats in the digital age, the FBI's RCFLs, with cutting-edge technology, expertise, and partnerships, remain a vital force in defending our communities and upholding justice.

Marcus Thompson, 40, Homeless Loudon, was charged with, Reckless Driving x2, Evading Arrest x2, Reckless Endangerment, and Due Care.

Deputy Harrison LCSO, was notified that the Lenoir City Police Department had spotted Marcus Thompson on Highway 321 on a black sports bike. Thompson had evaded multiple Deputies operating the same sports bike on 6-6-25 and had active warrants from the incident. While on Highway 11, The deputy observed Thompson pull behind the United Grocery Outlet and make a left turn onto Martel Road. The deputy initiated his emergency equipment in an attempt to traffic stop Thompson. Once the deputy got behind him, he began to accelerate at a very high rate of speed passing the vehicle in front of him over the double yellow into oncoming traffic in an attempt to elude him. The deputy terminated the pursuit on Martel Road at Independence Lane. Shortly after, a subject called in and stated they observed Thompson make a right turn onto Lakeview Road and another right turn onto Easter Ridge in order to return back to Highway 321. Deputy Parks was sitting stationary in the median on Highway 321 just before JB's Country Store when he observed Thompson pass him toward Blount County at speeds of approximately 100mph in a 40mph zone. Later on this date, Loudon County Dispatch was notified that Thompson was at Fairview Road.

Deputy Miller LCSO, responded to the TA truck stop to pick up Marcus Thompson for warrants out of our county. Knox County arrived with Mr. Thompson and the deputy was able to identify him. The deputy then took Mr. Thompson into custody and transported him to the Loudon County Jail without further incident.

911

Daniel Smith, 60, Town Creek Circle Lenoir City, was charged with Misuse of 911 Emergency System.

Sgt. Pesterfield LCSO, was notified by the Loudon

County Communications Center that at approximately 2256 hours, Daniel Smith called the emergency line to report that he believed drug activity was occurring at a nearby address in what he described as a homeless camp. Mr. Smith refused to speak to an officer about the matter. Mr. Smith sounded intoxicated, was not making sense, and became increasingly belligerent as the call went on. At approximately 2316, Mr. Smith called the emergency line once again with the same complaint. He did not make sense, was belligerent, and was cursing at the emergency call taker. Neither of these calls was in reference to an ongoing or reasonably perceived emergency. The deputy did contact Mr. Smith at his residence. He refused to exit his home and speak with him, only talking through an open window. The deputy did confirm that Mr. Smith had bloodshot and glassy eyes, slowed, slurred speech, and did not make sense consistent with intoxication.

Horoscopes

to people on many levels.

Cancer 6/21-7/22

Strong forces may act up today and ask you to stand up a little straighter than usual, Cancer. Keep your shoulders back and be proud. Don't think any less of yourself just because there is disagreement between you and others. Maintain respect for your opinions.

Leo 7/23-8/22

Feel free to take the lazy route today, Leo. Don't lift a finger if you don't have to. It may be hard to get others moving, too. You can prod all you want, but if people don't want to go, they aren't going to go. Your flexible nature might be tested.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

Your thinking is steady and reserved today, Virgo. Your mind is right in line with your ego, and you will be able to accurately verbalize what is going on inside. You might be a bit reserved in how much you tell people.

Libra 9/23-10/22

Today is an excellent day to say exactly how you feel, Libra. Your thinking is sharp and clear. Once you start talking, you may never stop. People will listen extra carefully to your words.

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

You might find that your brain is moving in the slow lane today, Scorpio. It may even be creeping over to the breakdown lane. You might find that it's a bit harder to make your witty rebuttals in conversation.

Sagittarius 11/22-12/21

Words may not be the best way to communicate things today, Sagittarius. Body language, touch, and taste will be much more effective. You will find that your senses are heightened. Let your feet follow your nose and go enjoy a good meal with someone special tonight.

Capricorn 12/22-01/19

Things may get quite intense today, Capricorn. There will be a great deal of information coming your way, but it might not all be that good. It seems that someone is putting a roadblock in your path, making it difficult for you to pass. Don't let this stop you. Use your creativity to find ways around any obstacles.

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

Your head may buzz with activity today, Aquarius. Suddenly it seems like the spotlight has been turned on. You're on stage and your brainpower is being tested. Are you up to the challenge? Ready or not, it's here. Remember the importance of individuality.

Pisces 2/19-3/20

Focus on the simple pleasures today, Pisces. Don't feel like you have to go to distant lands or engage in expensive recreational activities to find happiness and peace. Realize that everything you need is inside. Delight in nature. Smile at the Sun, Moon, and stars.

Aries 3/21-4/19

Focus on your creative mind today, Aries. This is a fertile time to plant seeds that will surely grow up healthy and strong. You have the ability to be prosperous now, but it won't come easily. The key for you now is to stay cool. Don't overreact to the little annoyances that come your way. You're beyond petty squabbles. Don't waste your time with them.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

Motivation must come from within today, Taurus. The only thing that can pull you out of bed is your inner drive. Too much partying may leave you spent to the point where you don't want to move. Remember to keep things in moderation. Be good to your body. Get outside and let your mind radiate outward like sunshine.
